Distance from St. Louis to Toledo, Ohio, via Chicago, 521 miles. Total time actually in air from St. Louis to Toledo, 10:55:00.

Average time per mile between St. Louis and Toledo, 1:37.23.

Flight from Pettisville to Toledo, 37 miles, made in 35 minutes.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Aug. 16.—Exactly 521 miles from his starting point, Harry N. Atwood, the Boston aviator, who is attempting to break the world's long-distance aeroplane record by flying from St. Louis to New York and Boston, alighted in Toledo this afternoon after completing the third day of his trip with a spectacular flight 2,000 feet above the city.

He covered the 133 miles from Elkhart, Ind., to Toledo with only one stop and in an actual flying time of 2 hours and 56 minutes. He started from Elkhart at 8:06 A. M., was compelled to stop at Pettisville, Ohio, for more than five hours because he ran out of gasoline, and, continuing his journey, guided by the tracks of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, he descended in Toledo at 4:03 P. M.

Atwood failed to bring with him as a passenger his manager, Leo Stevens, because of difficulty in starting from Elkhart. The starting place there was in the inclosed field for a half mile race track, affording a very poor runway. With Stevens in the machine Atwood started his motor and ran nearly the length of the field before he got any lifting power under his planes. His speed was too great to stop without crashing into the inside fence and his lift was not sufficient to carry him clearly over the tops of the trees along the outside fence.

The bottom plane and frame of his machine actually grazed the tree tops, cutting off some of the topmost leaves and small branches. Stevens's left foot was scratched and his sock torn. The precipitous angle of nearly 50 degrees at which Atwood's machine reached the top of the trees left his rear elevating plans seven or eight feet below the level of the front planes and disaster was dangerously imminent. However, by turning his machine hastily from an upward angle of 50 degrees to a downward angle he managed to get clear and land on the outside of the fence in a field of clover.

Atwood then decided to start from a stubble field bordering the inclosed field, again with Stevens as a passenger. The second effort to get away also failed, but upon his third start, without a passenger, Atwood carried his machine into the air without a hitch and was off immediately on his way to Toledo.

Between some of the stations Atwood beat the schedule time for ordinary trains. In the last lap of the day's run, he whipped up such a speed as hardly to be visible for longer than a minute at any one angle. The 33 miles from Pettisville into Toledo was run in 50 minutes, including a delay for starting and time lost in circling around the city in search of a landing place.

Steam whistles and thousands of people on top of office buildings greeted the airman as he came in from the West. All the way in he had been gliding "up hill" to get a good view of the town, he said. Instead of alighting in the west end he shot clear over the city and landed near the mouth of the Maumee River in the eastern section.

Intense interest marked his progress. When swooping low to read the names of the railroad stations, great crowds, including farmers who had come in by automobile from miles around, frantically yelled for him to come down. Some brought bouquets and lunches for the aviator.

Before Atwood whizzed into view, his machine coming on like a rapidly growing spot in the western horizon, the telegraph offices were kept busy with inquiries as to his whereabouts. Whenever two minutes elapsed without word from him an impatient message went over the wires, "Can you give us any news of the aeroplane?"

Going toward Pettisville, Atwood noticed that his gasoline was giving out and he was compelled unexpectedly to land. At Pettisville Atwood received inducements which resulted in a change in his plan of going to Sandusky to-night. He decided to remain in Toledo to-night and to-morrow at 8 A. M. to start for Cleveland, by way of Sandusky. He intends to remain in Cleveland over to-morrow night.

Atwood is now 745 miles from New York. With 520 miles already traveled, he will, on arriving in New York, have to his credit 1,265 miles, as computed by railroad mileage, including 286 miles from St. Louis to Chicago, 540 miles from Chicago to Buffalo, N. Y., and 439 miles from Buffalo to New York. But Atwood asserts that he will be entitled to considerably more than this, as he covered fifty or more miles in circling over St. Louis and Chicago and made detours en route. He said to-night he would not definitely decide whether he would continue on to Boston until after his arrival in New York. He said he felt obliged only to fly to New York, as that would be sufficient to establish a new world's record, but he still was considering the feasibility of flying up at Boston.

START FROM ELKHART.

Atwood Gives Up Plan to Carry Stevens as Passenger.

WALDO IN AUTO SMASH.

His Machine Wrecked by Another on the Way to Coney Island.

Just as the automobile of Police Commissioner Waldo, in which the Commissioner and his First Deputy, Douglas I. McKay, were traveling to Coney Island on a tour of inspection last night, stopped in the dark in the west drive of the Ocean Parkway, near King's Highway, to avoid crashing into a stalled car ahead, another auto, driven by Dr. William Eagle of 378 Bergen Street, Brooklyn, and containing a party of his friends, crashed into the rear of the Commissioner's machine.

Both autos were badly smashed. The Commissioner and his deputy were thrown from their seats to the front of their car, but escaped injury. None of the occupants of the second car was hurt, but the physician was arrested on a charge of reckless driving by Policeman William Oliver, the Commissioner's chauffeur.

Leaving him to take care of the damaged machine, and also to convoy the prisoner to the station, the Commissioner and Deputy McKay cut across country for three-quarters of a mile on foot to Gravesend Avenue and there took a train to Coney Island. They inspected the island until midnight, when they announced that they had found conditions satisfactory there. The Commissioner telephoned to the Sheepshead Bay station to ascertain the condition of his damaged auto, but was informed that Oliver was still working over it, with small chance of repairing it before morning. Thereupon the Commissioner and the Deputy returned to New York by train.

As he was stepping from a south-bound Eighth Avenue car at Seventy-fifth Street and Central Park West, last night, Sidney Steele, 45 years old, an architect, of 790 Park Avenue, was struck by the mudguard of an automobile that came up from behind the car.

He was thrown to the street, and was cut over the left eye. Dr. Andrews of Flower Hospital attended him, and then Mr. Steele went home in a taxicab.

The automobile was operated by James Timmons of 227 Grand Street.

MR. SPEYER WELL SATISFIED.

Says We Have a Very Favorable Balance Abroad—Banks' Position Good.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CARLSBAD, Aug. 16.—James Speyer, speaking to-day of general conditions in the United States, said:

"I doubt very much whether new large financial combinations will be undertaken in the near future. Careful business will go somewhat slow. It is fortunate that political agitation takes place at a time when fundamental conditions in the United States are thoroughly sound, as they surely are at present. While productive capacity in some branches of industry has been increased very fast, I do not believe there is any overproduction, and after a short time the growth of population and wealth will increase the consumptive power to the necessary extent.

"Our foreign trade for the year ending June 30 has given us a very favorable balance abroad—$500,000,000 to $550,000,000. Even if the grain crops are only average, as indicated, the cotton crop promises to be very large, so that, as far as one can predict, the current year should give us another large credit balance abroad.

"Considering the fact that general business, although good, is not overactive, it is natural under these conditions that money should be very easy. There is no overextension of credit, and the large banks and trust companies are in a good and strong position. It is likely that money will remain very easy, at least during the balance of the year. I doubt whether we shall have occasion to draw largely on our Enropean credit balance for some time.

"Regarding the recent heavy decline on the New York Stock Exchange it is, of course, difficult to express an opinion at this distance. It was probably due to forced liquidation by speculators."

PLANETS IN CONJUNCTION.

Prof. Pickering of Harvard Has Mars and Saturn Photographed.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Aug. 16.—The eastern heavens to-night presented the unusual spectacle of the apparent conjunction of two planets, Mars and Saturn, near the moon. The planets, although appearing to the naked eye and to telescopes of average strength as a brilliant double star, were, in fact, about two-thirds the apparent width of the moon apart.

The spectacle was so unusual that Prof. E. C. Pickering, director of the Harvard College Observatory, came from his Summer home to-day to supervise observations of the phenomena.

Photographs of the conjunction were taken at the observatory.

The juxtaposition of Mars and Saturn was visible in New York at 12:30 o'clock this morning. Heavy clouds had obscured the sky during the first part of the night. The moon broke through the clouds at 10:30 o'clock, and a few minutes later disappeared. Clouds in the east began breaking up about midnight, and a half hour later the moon and the two planets near it came into view.

Mars appeared above and to the north of Saturn. The former was very bright and of a reddish color. Saturn was white and brilliant. The distance between them, which in the measurements of astronomy is given as twenty-one minutes, appeared to the casual observer to be about the length of a new lead pencil. The moon could easily have covered both planets.

AGREE ON PUBLICITY BILL.

Senators Limited to Expenses of $10,000 and Representatives to $5,000.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The Senate without division or discussion to-day agreed to the conference report on the Campaign Publicity bill, and the report was presented to the House, action being deferred there until probably to-morrow. The measure will then be ready for the President's signature.

The bill as agreed to by the conferees includes the Senate amendment extending the requirement for publicity of campaign expenses to primary and special elections, and nominating conventions as well as to general elections.

The amendment limits candidates for Senator to a campaign expenditure of $10,000 and candidates for Representatives to $5,000. The conferees disagreed to the Senate amendment which would have forbidden any candidate from spending a sum in the aggregate exceeding more than 10 cents for each voter in his district or State.

TO CUT STEEL TARIFF IN THE COTTON BILL

Cummins's Amendment Accepted by Senate Democrats and House Agrees to Revise Schedule.

TAFT'S WOOL VETO READY

Final Vote on the Free List Bill Goes Over—Adjournment May Be Delayed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—After a stormy conference that lasted off and on for about seven hours the Senate Democrats this afternoon adopted a partial programme that insures the passage of the Cotton bill through the Senate, with the Cummins amendment attached revising the iron and steel schedule and another amendment touching the chemical schedule. At the same time the House leaders reached a conclusion that the iron and steel schedule must be revised, and the Ways and Means Committee will at once begin the final preparation of a measure which they expect to substitute for the insurgent Senate metal provision when the Cotton bill gets in conference between the two Houses.

Word of the decision of the House leaders influenced the Democratic Senators in deciding definitely to accept the iron and steel amendment, as it was suggested such a course would expedite the final disposition of the matter. But on the other insurgent amendments affecting the lead and sugar schedules the Senators have reached no decision. The conference may meet again to-morrow morning and decide on these amendments. The House leaders under Mr. Underwood have always been willing to revise the steel schedule, if feasible, and to-day's decision is intended to answer the charges of William Jennings Bryan against Mr. Underwood's sincerity.

The question of adjournment was not discussed at the minority conference, though it is thought that the need of the Democrats to make their positions clear on the insurgent amendments may protract debate. As to the final date for adjournment everything is again uncertain. Speaker Clark guessed next Wednesday this morning, but this afternoon Mr. Underwood thought ten days from now would be the earliest possible. On the Senate side the talk this morning before the conference was optimistic for adjournment on Sunday after an all night Saturday session. But the certainty that the Cotton bill will be passed by the Senate and that the managers for the two Houses will have to adjust differences between the House iron and steel bill, yet to be drafted, and the Cummins iron and steel amendment, which will pass the Senate, makes that extremely doubtful.

May Delay Cotton Vote.

It is not even certain now that a vote on the Cotton bill can be reached to-morrow. To-day at 2 o'clock all doubt on it seemed to have been exhausted, but it was then that the Democratic Senators through Leader Martin asked that a recess of two hours be taken to allow the minority to conclude the conference that had been broken into by the convening of the Senate at 12 o'clock. The recess was accordingly taken, but when the Vice President called the Senate to order at 4 o'clock only a handful of Democrats appeared, their conference not being within three hours of completing its work. That made it impossible to get a quorum in the Senate and adjournment was taken at once.

The Democratic conference to-day was one of the most exciting of the session. The wrangling began at the outset, and for a long time it seemed as if no agreement could be reached. Then after the Senate had adjourned because the Democrats had broken the quorum, the conference could scarcely get a majority of its members together. At last Mr. Johnston of Alabama offered a resolution, which was defeated, and he left the conference in anger. Mr. Bacon and some others then retired to draft another resolution declaring for the House Cotton bill unamended, leaving iron and steel to the initiative of the House. This resolution after long debate was defeated also, and then the decision was reached as a compromise to vote for the House Cotton bill with the steel and chemical amendments.

The acceptance of the Cummins iron and steel amendments seems enough of a concession to win the acquiescence of the insurgents in the House features that will be retained. They have admitted all along that the House Cotton bill was not distasteful to them, and if they can use it as a vehicle for sending to the President other schedules for his veto they will be satisfied. Mr. La Follette, however, who has a cotton bill of his own, and who much prefers legislation with his name attached, may object to this procedure and will certainly try to have his bill substituted for the House measure.

In any form, however, the bill with all its amendments will meet the prompt veto of the President. He concluded his first veto message on a tariff bill to-day when he sent his message on the Wool bill to the Public Printer. The message was considered and approved at a special Cabinet meeting this morning and will be sent to the House to-morrow. An effort to override it will be made in the House and may succeed there. But in the Senate Mr. Penrose has ascertained that he has a safe if narrow margin to sustain the President.

Twice to-day Mr. Underwood made an effort to get a final vote on the conference report on the Free List bill, which lay on the Speaker's desk with all amendments agreed to between the two houses except the Kern amendments, put on in the Senate to restrict the admission of breadstuffs and meats to countries that give us certain reciprocal considerations, and lemons, which was one of the amendments put on by the House after the bill came from the Senate.

Delay Vote On Free List.

Mr. Underwood said the House conferees were ready to let go of the lemons and accept the Kern amendments with the insertion after the word "corn" in the breadstuff amendment of the words "not to be used for purposes of distillation." He explained that there was a desire on the part of the House and Senate managers to have both houses act at once so that the bill could be sent to the President by 4 o'clock. Under the circumstances, he said, there was no need of a further conference.

The Republicans seemed unwilling to have the matter disposed of so summarily, and Mr. Fitzgerald of New York offered some opposition to accepting the Kern amendment on the meat clause, saying that meats had recently gone up 7 per cent., and he believed that there had been an effort to give the country what was so much desired in this report. He also had some objection to striking out the lemon amendment so quickly.

With this show of opposition and in view of the fact that there was pending before the House in Committee of the Whole the Black Warrior Dam bill, which was in a sense a local measure affecting Mr. Underwood's constituents, he withdrew the motion for the time being.

The last thing at 6 o'clock Mr. Underwood again called up the bill, but Mr. Mann objected and urged in view of the hour and the lateness of the hour that it go over.

There is now every prospect that the bill will be disposed of by both houses to-morrow and by conferees will soon follow on the President's desk. Democrats in the House are supposed to have their party

UNUSUAL STORIES BY ZOLA AND GORKY

Translated for the first time into English especially for readers of Next Sunday's Times.

FORGOT TO DECLARE JEWELS AND GOWNS

Mrs. Hamilton, Cousin of Mrs. George Gould, Says She Is Not Familiar with Customs Laws.

UNDECLARED GOODS SEIZED

Had $565 Worth of Gowns and Jewelry, but in the Bustle of Arriving It Slipped Her Mind, She Asserts.

Her poor memory caused Mrs. William A. Hamilton of 177 East Sixty-fourth Street to visit the Custom House yesterday to explain to Deputy Surveyor George Smyth her failure to make a proper customs declaration upon her arrival on Tuesday on the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie. Mrs. Hamilton, who is the wife of a former Vice President of the St. Louis & Southwestern Railroad, had been several months abroad. She is a niece of the late Mrs. Mary C. Kingdon, the mother of Mrs. George Gould, and was with Mrs. Kingdon at the Ritz in Paris when the latter died suddenly on June 9.

Mrs. Hamilton's declaration showed that she had purchased only $25 worth of goods abroad. Customs Inspector Byron Lyon, who examined her baggage, found that Mrs. Hamilton had more goods than she had declared. Appraiser Francis verified his suspicion, and when Deputy Surveyor John P. O'Connor questioned Mrs. Hamilton she confessed the forgetfulness which brought her to the Custom House.

An examination of one trunk revealed that she was bringing in without the formality of a declaration what she termed "a few trifles." These included a gown and wrap, a gold mesh bag, a gold cigarette case, lace waists, some china, and other small articles, all worth $565.

In her trip to the Custom House Mrs. Hamilton was accompanied by her husband, and to Mr. Smyth she repeated her story of forgetfulness. She said she knew the articles were not on her declaration, but it had been her firm intention to report their presence in her trunk and to amend her declaration, but in the bustle of arrival had forgotten to tell the Inspector. It was not until she was questioned that she realized her mistake, she said.

She also pleaded ignorance of the method of making out a declaration. She generally traveled with the Goulds, she said, and whenever she did so one of the Gould family attended to declarations.

While the examination was going on word came from the Appraisers giving the value of the undeclared articles. The customs officials ordered the articles seized. This means that Mrs. Hamilton may perhaps be allowed to recover them on the payment of their foreign value plus 60 per cent. duty. She may be penalized also.

Commenting upon Mrs. Hamilton's case Government officials said that smuggling is pretty well broken up, and though it still exists, it is principally through failure to declare small articles. Word has reached the Custom House in more than one case lately of persons who have bragged that they have smuggled, but in the cases investigated the articles were of so little value that it was not thought advisable to proceed against them. The names of such persons are noted, however, and in the future they will be closely watched should they return again from abroad.

WAITS IN VAIN FOR "DADDY."

Baby Girl Lost on Elevated Platform Looked for Him on Every Train.

Herman Fastanau, ticket agent at the northbound station of the Second Avenue elevated at Seventy-second Street, looked out of the window of his office last night and noticed a pretty little yellow-haired girl, about 2 years old, standing on the platform. She was smiling and greeting passengers as they got off the trains, and was quite alone.

He went out and asked her if she was waiting for any one. She cheerfully replied that she was waiting for "daddy" and he was coming on the train. The ticket agent let her wait until one or two trains passed and then became convinced that "daddy" was not coming, and called Policeman Langan, who thought it best to take her to the station house and place her in charge of the matron.

On the way the child prattled merrily, but could not tell her name or address. Passing a baker's shop she pointed at the cakes in the window and the kind-hearted policeman took her inside and had a good-sized bag filled with what she liked most.

She liked the station house, but seemed worried because "daddy" did not come. The police are at a loss to account for her presence on the elevated platform as the ticket agent is positive she did not pass his office. The child wore a tan-colored dress and had no hat. She is somewhat sunburned, and it was thought she might have been separated from her parents while returning from a day at some of the seaside resorts.

MISS TAFT TO USE YACHT.

Will Entertain on the Mayflower—President's Maine Trip.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., Aug. 16.—President Taft's yacht, the United States steamship Mayflower, dropped anchor off West Beach, Beverly, to-day, and will remain during the President's stay at Parramatta.

The Mayflower this year has a new commander, George W. Lyons having been succeeded by Lieut. Commander Towers Symington of West Virginia. Commander Lyons is to be stationed at the Annapolis Naval Academy. President Taft intends to take a cruise along the Maine coast in the Mayflower soon, the date of the start being dependent upon the adjournment of Congress.

The yacht will be used considerably this Summer by Miss Helen Taft for entertaining, and is admirably adapted for such occasions. It carries its own band and orpheum, and its saloon makes a beautiful ballroom.

POPE VERY FEEBLE, BUT ABLE TO WALK

IS THIN, PALE, AND BENT

Gazes Almost Despairingly at Accumulation of Papers on His Desk—Receives a Number of Friends.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Aug. 16.—To-day, for the first time, the watch around Pope Pius, which had rendered him unapproachable, was relaxed.

Partly through friendly persuasion I succeeded in entering the papal apartments. I crossed the immense Clementine Hall, the room of the Pope's chair bearers, the hall of the Swiss Guards, and the Throne Room. All the rooms were empty until I reached the apartment in which Pope Leo died, the last room before the large library, which has been transformed for the time being into the Pontiff's bedroom.

In Pope Leo's room I was stopped. Under the present Pontificate it has been used as a small throne room, and in it the Pope's secretaries, the doctors in attendance, and high prelates of the Vatican discuss the situation and the chances of recovery or relapse. From it, whenever the door of the library was opened to allow the Pope's sisters or some official to pass, I was able to look into the library, where the Pope's bed occupies a space between the two large windows, protected by screens.

I saw the Pontiff thinner, paler, more bent than before his illness, looking a shadow of his old self. He was dressed in white, and his white skull cap was hardly distinguishable on his white hair. He moved very slowly, leaning heavily on a stick, while a valet followed, ready to support him.

Thus, seeming very fatigued, Pope Pius crossed the library and reached his desk, which is near the entrance door. He sat in his usual armchair, having on his right a tall crucifix and in front a statue of Joan of Arc. He gazed almost despairingly at the accumulation of papers before him.

The impression I received was that the Pope can hardly be called convalescent.

ROME, Aug. 16.—Pope Pius, whose condition shows marked improvement, sat up nearly all day to-day.

His Holiness even ventured to walk from his armchair to his writing desk to get some papers required while discussing official matters with Cardinal Merry del Val, the Papal Secretary of State. The Cardinal's visit to the sick room, however, was not a prolonged one, being cut short in order that he might not fatigue the Pope, who still needs quiet and rest.

In the course of the day the Pontiff received a number of his friends, his physicians believing that a chat with others than those engaged in the sick room might tend toward brightening the spirits of the patient.

His Holiness was not informed of the sudden death of Cardinal Moran in Sydney, Australia, to-day. It was feared that the shock might have a detrimental effect on the Pontiff's health, as he held Cardinal Moran in high esteem.

SUICIDE OF NEW YORK BOY.

Body of Herbert Livingston Found Hanging at West Point.

HIGHLAND FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 16.—In the woods at West Point Military Academy Charles Conley, a seven-year-old boy, to-day found the body of a young man hanging to a six-foot stake used to support a rack of cordwood.

The man was about 20 years old. In the pockets were found some small change and several checks made to the order of Herbert Livingston, and a notebook also bearing the same name, but there was no address. A bunch of keys bearing the registry tag of the Empire Registry Company, 32 Broadway, New York, was numbered 161,401. He was well dressed in a gray suit with black stripes, dark lavender tie, gray felt hat initialed "H. L." His other clothing also bore similar marks. He had been dead several days.

A return ticket on the Day Line steamer Hendryk Hudson, dated Saturday last, was found in his pockets. There were no letters. A towel bearing the steamer's imprint was used to suspend the body, which hung in a crouching position with the feet touching the ground.

The police at Headquarters, when notified last night of the finding of the body at Highland Falls, looked up their records and found that a Herbert Livingston of 264 West 113th Street had been reported missing on Aug. 12, and that a general alarm had been sent out for him since then.

At 264 West 113th Street, a four-story brownstone boarding house, Stanley Livingston, brother of Herbert Livingston, was informed of his brother's death. He said he, his brother, and their mother had been boarding at the place for some time, but that his mother was away in the country for the Summer.

On Saturday last his brother disappeared, and, failing to receive word from or of him, he visited Police Headquarters on Tuesday, and asked that a confidential alarm be sent out.

TIES TRAP A FAT MAN.

Sticks Between Them While Trying to Reach an Elevated Station.

William Shaw, whose waist measurement is more than normal, narrowly escaped death under an elevated train yesterday afternoon when he tried to climb from the street through the tracks to the platform. He succeeded in getting his head and shoulders through the ties and there he stuck. Cries of women on the platform summoned the station agent and a special officer and they flagged an approaching train and saved Shaw being decapitated.

Two men tried to pull him through the ties, but it could not be done, so a ladder was placed against the elevated structure and he was pulled down from beneath.

Shaw had appeared at the 174th Street station earlier without money to buy a ticket. He was assisted to the street and started homeward. A few minutes later his head and shoulders appeared above the ties.

Later in Morrisania Court Shaw was fined $3 for intoxication.

GLOBE RUSHER DUE TO-DAY.

Jaeger-Schmidt Hopes to Catch Outward-Bound French Liner.

André Jaeger Schmidt, the correspondent of Excelsior, a Paris daily paper, who is attempting to circle the world in 30 days, is expected to arrive at the Grand Central Station from Montreal at noon to-day. It is his intention to sail on La Lorraine for Havre, although he will not arrive until two hours after the steamer is to depart. The officials of the French Line believe that he will be enabled to board her.

Jaeger Schmidt asked that the vessel be held until his arrival, but as she is a mail carrier it was impossible to grant his request. Instructions have been given to the Captain, however, to delay La Lorraine in the river as long as possible and to proceed very slowly out to sea. An automobile will be waiting at the railroad station and a fast tug at Pier 57, North River. The traveler will make record time across the city, and as soon as he boards the tug it will proceed at top speed after the departing liner.

The journalist left Paris on July 17.

WOMAN OF 99 OPERATED ON.

Wilkesbarre's Oldest Resident Had Appendicitis.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Aug. 16.—Mrs. Baker Hillman, 99 years old, was operated on for appendicitis at her home here last Sunday, and to-day her physicians announced that she is making good progress toward recovery.

Mrs. Hillman, who is Wilkesbarre's oldest resident, has always enjoyed good health.

PAPER CLUBS FOR POLICE

Harder Than Hickory Sticks, Lynn (Mass.) Patrolmen Say.

LYNN, Mass., Aug. 16.—Lynn police are now equipped with paper clubs. This does not mean that the policemen will be any milder in arbitrating future differences with lawbreakers.

The paper clubs are harder and tougher than the hickory sticks and were adopted after the patrolmen had shown the Police Committee that some of their harder headed prisoners, who put up a fight and had to be subdued by force, had shattered the wooden clubs and thus disarmed the officers of the law.

REJECT LIBERAL SUNDAY LAW

Connecticut House Refuses to Reconsider Bill Passed by Senate.

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 16.—All efforts to secure modification of the present Sunday observance law at this session of the General Assembly ended to-day when the House refused to reconsider its action in rejecting a bill which sought to give a more liberal Sunday, especially in respect to amateur sports.

The Senate had previously passed such a bill and the House had rejected it. The failure to secure reconsideration to-day effectually killed the project.

BALDWIN'S VETO ON PENSIONS

Unwilling to Saddle State with Expense of $350,000 to $400,000 a Year.

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 16.—Gov. Baldwin to-day sent in his fourth veto. It was a bill which would have given each veteran of the civil war an annual pension of $30 in lieu of the abatement of taxes now in vogue.

The Governor thinks the State is caring amply for the veterans, and that the expense of $350,000 or $400,000 which would be incurred if the bill became a law is too great a burden.

TWO DEAD BABIES ON TRACK.

Boy's and Girl's Bodies Tied Together—Believed Thrown from Train.

Special to The New York Times.

SEWELL, N. J., Aug. 16.—The police are puzzled by the discovery yesterday of two dead babies found tied together on the tracks of the West Jersey & Seashore Railroad. It is supposed that they were thrown from a train during the night, but there is no clue to their identity.

The bodies are now in charge of Coroner Stout of Wenonah. One was that of a boy and the other a girl, the former some months older than the latter. Both were about a year old.

RAID AT CONEY ISLAND.

Police Find 100 Men Gambling in Oceanic Walk House.

Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty and ten of his men raided a gambling and pool room on the second floor of a house on Oceanic Walk, between the Bowery and the beach, at Coney Island, yesterday afternoon. They broke through a rear door with axes and rushed upstairs, where they found more than 100 men seated at tables with a telephone and packs of playing cards in evidence.

The police had warrants for five men issued by Chief Magistrate Kempner of Brooklyn yesterday on the complaint of Detective Raschke, who says he gathered evidence of gambling in the place on Aug. 4. All the men were permitted to file past Raschke while he picked out those for whom the warrants called. Three of them were charged with being common gamblers—George Conklin of 774 Third Avenue, Brooklyn; Thomas Francis, 1,200 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn, and John Jones, 74 Fulton Street, Brooklyn. A fourth, John Ryan, of 2,488 West Fifteenth Street, Coney Island, was arrested as the pool seller.

DEVERY AID WOULD DIE.

Edward Sugden Drinks Poison in the Park After Seeing the ex-Chief.

Edward Sugden, once Devery's right-hand man and a power in the days when Devery was Chief of Police, attempted suicide yesterday in Central Park, near 106th Street and Fifth Avenue, by drinking poison.

"Down and out," he gasped to Sergt. Cassidy and Policeman Donohue, who had seen him fall. He was sent to Mount Sinai Hospital in an automobile, and prompt work by the doctors revived him.

Sugden was appointed to the police force in April, 1896. When Devery was Captain of the 125th Street Station Sugden was his wardman, and when Devery went to Headquarters he took Sugden with him. Sugden was dismissed from the service in 1905 by Commissioner McAdoo for criticising the orders of his superiors. Since that time he has been a dealer in real estate and has lived at College Point, L. I.

Sugden saw Devery last Sunday, but Devery at first could not remember whether they had talked together or not. Later he said that inquiries on the subject of the conversation might be better addressed to Sugden.

"But Sugden may be dead," was objected.

"Then you will have to wait till you go to Heaven to talk with him, I guess," said Devery.

ENGLISH STRIKE SET FOR TO-DAY

Government's Efforts to Prevent Railway Men from Going Out Have Failed.

ENTIRE ARMY IS PREPARED

But Ministers Seem to Have Weakened as to Protection to be Given to Railways.

MORE RIOTS IN LIVERPOOL

Troops Bivouacked in Streets of City—Thousands of Americans May Have to Stay Abroad.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 17.—"Is it a strike?" THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent asked Mr. Lowth, General Secretary of the Railway Workers' Union, as the representatives of the railroad trade unions left the Board of Trade offices yesterday afternoon after a conference with the Right Hon. Sydney Buxton.

Mr. Buxton, the President of the Board of Trade, had ben closeted with the railway managers all the morning, and when the men's representatives were called to the conference late in the afternoon both sides had refused to budge an inch.

Mr. Buxton had asked the companies to meet the men half way and to agree at least to a discussion with the union officials. This the companies refused, and it now remains to be seen how the unions will give effect to their ultimatum when the twenty-four hours' grace allowed to the companies expires at 8 o'clock this morning.

That a national railway strike will be called appears inevitable. How far the railway men's unions will be able to tie up traffic is the only point on which there is any difference of opinion. The unionists on the chief roads number only one in every four employes, but they represent the best and most skilled classes of labor, and if they come out on strike to-day both the efficiency and the security of the railway services will be jeopardized.

The railway companies promise an effective though restricted service. Sir W. Guy Granet, General Manager of the Midland Railway Company, which is offering a bonus of 50 per cent. on the amount earned during the strike to such of its men as remain loyal, voiced the attitude of the companies in a statement made last night.

"If the railway companies have to fight," said Sir Guy, "their success depends upon whether they have sufficient protection or not. The Government at our conference to-day has undertaken to put at the service of the railway companies every available soldier in the country. This protection will be given to-night. We have been arranging with the War Office this afternoon where the troops shall go, and everywhere troops are moving to the principal centres in the north of England and in the Midlands to insure that the railway service shall be carried on.

"The Government realizes that the recent partial strikes paralyzed the trade of the country, and that if transport were further held up conditions would go from bad to worse, so every nerve is being strained to prevent internal transport from coming to a standstill. The railway managers have made adequate arrangements to carry on an efficient but necessarily curtailed service of passenger and goods trains, but if adequate protection fails us, of course we cannot carry it on.

"I do not anticipate that we shall be unable to cope with the difficulties. England is a wonderful country for railways. You may shut up one line, but it would require an extraordinary organization on the part of the men to shut up all the routes to the great centres, because they are all served by several lines, and, while there may be trouble at one place, we can use alternative routes.

Railway Companies' Plans.

"Personally I do not anticipate that more than 25 to 30 per cent. of the men will come out, but our preparations are made on the assumption that 75 per cent. will cease work.

"Our method of working will be that we shall extend the block system. Where there are signal boxes, say three miles apart, we shall make our signaling stations twenty miles apart by shutting up the intervening signal boxes, and, failing signal boxes, we can flag the trains.

"All the railway systems will be worked as one. Special time tables have been prepared of curtailed services of trains, something similar to those in operation on Sunday. Of course, at the present moment it is impossible to say how far we shall have to cut down our service, as this depends upon the number of men of all branches we have at our disposal.

"First and foremost our efforts will be concentrated on providing food for the people in the large towns. Our

...ity will be to provide manufac-...ers with raw materials and coal, ...ile the railways and steamships will also ...eive full attention. If the men wish ...t there will be a fight to a finish."

As Mr. Guy Gruhet's assertion regarding Government assistance for the railways may possibly convey a false impression, it is as well to point out that all that the Government at present contemplates is the protection of life and property and the insuring of the right of all who wish to work to do so.

Statements made by Messrs. Churchill and Lloyd-George and Lord Haldane in Parliament yesterday made this quite clear. Mr. Churchill said that neither side would be supported by the Government. It would be the duty of the Government, in the event of a paralysis of the great railway lines, on which the lives and food of the people depended, to secure persons engaged on them in full legal protection and to make sure that no great disaster or catastrophe should overwhelm the people owing to the breakdown of the machinery by which they lived from day to day.

Mr. Lloyd-George's statement betrayed sympathy with the railway men, though he rated their executives severely for giving such short notice as twenty-four hours to the companies.

AMERICANS CAN'T GET HOME.

Thousands Likely to be Marooned in England in a Day or Two.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Already tremendous inconvenience has been caused to hundreds of Americans who should now be on the water homeward bound, but who are marooned here either through the canceling of liners' sailings or their indefinite postponement. Each day greatly aggravates the situation, and should next Saturday's boats fail to get away, which at the moment seems extremely likely, there will be several thousand unwilling American visitors in England.

At present the Cunard and White Star Lines, which make Liverpool their port of embarkation, are the most seriously affected, although it is quite likely that Southampton will be included in the strike zone at any moment.

The first vessel to be affected was the Cunarder Caronia, which should have sailed yesterday with a full passenger list. Although the passengers left London for Liverpool, the vessel did not get away simply because it had not a crew. The majority of the passengers are still in Liverpool, but some were fortunate enough to get their passages transferred to the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which got away all right to-day.

To-night, I understand, the sailing of the Caronia has been canceled and the Cunard people are diverting all their energies to the Lusitania, which should sail on Saturday, but which is extremely unlikely to do so. As may be imagined, she has a crowded passenger list, including many well-known Americans, among them Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff, James R. Keene, Mrs. Elmer Black, R. K. Cassatt, H. Yale Dolan, and George F. Harriman.

At present the Lusitania is in exactly the same condition as when she arrived in the Mersey yesterday. Her cargo has not been touched, and there is no coal in her bunkers.

The White Star liner Celtic, which is scheduled to sail to-morrow, will not do so, her many passengers having been informed to-day that it is hoped to get her away on Saturday.

Other liners held up at Liverpool include the White Star liner Zeeland for Boston, the Megantic for Quebec, and half a dozen others engaged in the Atlantic traffic.

So far the German lines have not been affected, but as their vessels are full up they are unable to relieve the situation to any extent. The Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, which sails on Friday, is over-crowded, many of the officers having given up their rooms to accommodate Americans who must get back.

The steamship offices have been besieged all day by anxious crowds wanting to know the latest news of the situation. Unfortunately, little comfort could be given to them by the officials, who frankly admitted that the situation was very serious, with prospects of getting worse.

At the hotels the one topic of conversation is the strike and its effects on transportation. In some cases delay in getting back to America means serious inconvenience and loss. At the Ritz to-day I saw Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, who was much distressed because of her fear that she will not be able to get back to New York immediately. She had just heard that her daughter in New York had undergone an operation for appendicitis and wants to rush to her bedside. She had intended to sail at the end of the month, but the news of her daughter's illness decided her to go immediately. She is having great trouble in her attempt to obtain passage in Friday's German boat, which is the only one likely to get away.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 16.—The men on the Cunard liner Lusitania have refused to sign for the outward voyage to New York, scheduled to begin on Saturday, and the vessel has been unable to coal, and lies to-night helpless and forlorn in the Mersey.

It was announced yesterday at the offices of the White Star and Cunard Steamship Lines that they were refusing freight to Liverpool, except that which was shipped at the risk of the senders. The shippers were informed that if the freight could not be delivered at Liverpool it would be brought back to this side. At the local offices of the steamship lines affected by the strike in England it was stated that advices from the other side indicated that the situation was very serious.

LITTLE HOPE OF PEACE.

Conferences at Board of Trade Fail—Laborites Attack Government.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Though the Government to-day made an energetic attempt to avert the calamity of a general railway strike the present indications are that one will materialize at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning when the ultimatum of the employés expires.

Conferences were held to-day and to-night at the Board of Trade with representatives of both sides of the dispute by Sydney Buxton, President of the Board, but they did not actually result in a meeting between the contending parties. An adjournment of the conferences until to-morrow was arranged late to-night in order to enable Mr. Buxton to see the executives of three railway men's unions, who are now en route to London from Perth. This fact alone leaves a glimmer of hope that the men's ultimatum may, at the last moment, be extended twenty-four hours, and provide an opportunity for further negotiations. This is the Government's present desire, but up to midnight there was no sign of any change in the situation, and to-night declared that the prospects of a peaceful settlement of the railway dispute were very remote.

One minute after he had left the ground the airman had risen to a height of 800 feet, and after circling twice around the driving park, he picked out a point above the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad tracks and started due east.

"The air's fine; if it keeps up this way all day I may break a speed record," said Atwood, as he waved to the crowds below. He said he hoped to reach Toledo before 1 o'clock.

With the white wings glimmering in the bright sun, Atwood's machine for twenty minutes was visible from his starting point. Great crowds of people, including many farmers who had come in automobiles, turned out to watch the aviator until he disappeared in the east.

Discussing his experiences from his air craft in his cross-country trip, Atwood said:

"I am sure when aviation becomes common it will add a viewpoint to life.

"Seen from my machine, houses look as small as dog kennels, towns appear to be clusters of toy houses, and rivers look like brooks. Over the town the temperature is slightly warmer than over the open country. It is curious that above the din of a city one may sometimes hear such distinct sounds as the barking of dogs."

PETTISVILLE, Ohio, Aug. 16.—Aviator Atwood alighted at this city to replenish his gasoline and oil supply at 10:15 A. M. He had traveled 97 miles in two hours and six minutes. His average speed for this morning's journey was 48 miles an hour.

Atwood, who did not appear fatigued when he reached Pettisville, said:

"My machine is in perfect condition and the air currents were favorable throughout the morning trip. I had a delightful flight from Elkhart and enjoyed every minute of the journey. I feel fine."

A delegation from Wauseon, Ohio, came here in an automobile and took Atwood to that town for luncheon.

protection in the running of their trains, and that they would not yield to the men. The representatives of the railway men's unions declared that the strike would take place at the expiration of their ultimatum, to-morrow morning.

At Aldershot the military authorities are taking every precaution to insure the working of the railways if a strike is called. Every soldier in the Aldershot command has been placed under orders for duty. Previously only the cavalry and infantry had been under orders, but to-day the engineers, the army service corps, and the garrison artillery were warned to have every man in their ranks ready to move at a moment's notice.

If a strike is declared, three regiments of cavalry and three batteries of Royal Horse Artillery will first be moved direct to London, to be followed at short intervals by infantry battalions, field artillery, the Royal Engineers, and the medical units of the command. Only the barracks guards will be left at Aldershot. All the soldiers will be armed with rifles and ball ammunition. They will be stationed along the railway lines north and south of London. The cavalry will be employed at stations, and will also patrol the lines so as to be able to get quickly to any point of danger.

It is estimated that 25,000 men from Aldershot will be prepared to move in a few hours, trains to accommodate that number having been assembled there. Similar precautions have been taken at all the other military stations in England, Scotland, and Wales, so that in case of need every available soldier will be on duty to insure the continuance of railway traffic.

Lloyd-George Hedges?

To-night Mr. Lloyd-George in the House of Commons again answered a question as to what the Government's policy of protection to the railways would be. It seemingly hedged from earlier statements made by himself and Mr. Churchill. The Chancellor said:

"The Government is bound to protect life and property, but its responsibility does not end there. It must do all in its power to see that fair play is given to the community at large. Nothing is further from the mind of the Government than even to convey the impression that it would intervene in the interests of any party. It is essential tht the Government should preserve an attitude of complete impartiality. It certainly does not mean to give any guarantee or to lend any countenance to the theory that it has undertaken in advance to be any party to the controversy."

Meetings of railway men were held in various provincial centres to-night and at all of them enthusiastic resolutions were passed favoring a strike.

The Railway Review, the official organ of the railway workers, edited by George James Wardle, M. P., to-morrow will publish the following manifesto:

To the Men: The momentous hour has come. Unless the railway companies are prepared to concede to their employes the elementary but important right of being represented by their unions a general strike will take place. The railway men are determined to be helots no longer. Their long years of bondage will be brought to an end. The conciliation boards have broken down and their existence in their present form can no longer be tolerated. They have become instruments of oppression and caricatures of justice and fair play.

Ramsay Macdonald, leader of the Labor Party, declared to-night that the resentment shown in the present crisis had been accumulating for years and that the men had been driven to the conclusion that they could not obtain justice without force.

To-day London seemed gradually settling down to normal conditions, but elsewhere there was no improvement in the strike situation. A. P. Stanley, the American manager of the London Electric Railway, which includes most of the underground services, conferred all day with his employes. At the conclusion of the conference he announced that the companies had made concessions which the men accepted provisionally. It is stated, however, that although the men are satisfied with the concessions, if there should be a general strike of railway employes, they will join it.

Wants Ministers Impeached.

George Lansbury, a Socialist Member of Parliament, who wants to drive the Government from power and to impeach the Ministers because they called out the troops to suppress strike rioting, created a scene in the House of Commons this afternoon by accusing the supporters of the policy of utilizing the troops of countenancing "the butchery of the innocents."

"I never knew such a bloodthirsty gang," he shouted across the House, and was proceeding to denounce Home Secretary Churchill when he was sharply called to order by Speaker Lowther.

Four unions joined in the ultimatum to the companies. Their total membership is about 100,000, and it is supposed that 70,000 other railway men are unionists. While the total number of men employed on the twenty-seven principal railways is 460,000, a majority of the skilled laborers are union men. The unions have funds amounting to $3,105,000, and say they have made arrangements by which they can disburse eight weeks' strike pay.

The residents of many of the poorer districts are already suffering from prolonged idleness and in some sections of London and other large cities where the husbands and wives equally contribute to the support of their homes both are on strike and dependent on charity for food.

LIVERPOOL STRIKE EXTENDS.

Street Car Men Ordered Out—More Rioting—Famine Near.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 16.—The Strike Committee issued an order to-night calling out all the street car employes of Liverpool.

A renewal of rioting growing out of the strike of dockers and allied unionists occurred to-night in the Scotland Road division of the city. The police again had to make baton charges and the soldiers also were called upon. Their presence, however, was sufficient to overawe the rioters, who dispersed.

Motor wagons which were conveying print paper to the newspaper offices were attacked, street car windows were smashed, and another attempt was made to release prisoners from the vans in which they were being conveyed to Walton Jail. The police and soldiers, however, were present in force, the troops with their bayonets fixed, and the crowd was not so daring as last night and did not compel the militia to fire.

To-night the troops are bivouacked in the streets of the city. They have received orders not to fire over the heads of rioters in the future, as this endangers innocent parties, but that if it becomes necessary to shoot they shall pick out the apparent ringleaders of the mob.

Coal and provisions are being brought into the city under military escort.

Unless a railway strike is averted, two days more will find the bread supply exhausted. The only bread now in the city is that displayed in the shop windows.

Some restaurants already have been closed because their managers could not obtain sufficient provisions. All the necessaries in food have advanced greatly in price.

In many other of the great provincial towns business has been partially or completely dislocated by the strikes. Some trains out of Birmingham already have been canceled.

At Manchester provisions are already running short, and owing to the curtailment of train service many suburbanites were unable to reach their homes to-night.

THREE UNDER ARREST FOR NEGRO LYNCHING

Special Policeman, Mill Worker, and a Clerk of Coatesville Are the Prisoners.

FIRST SUSPECT RELEASED

Chief of Police Says Citizens Are Trying to Block Him—May Arrest Town's Leaders.

Special to The New York Times.

COATESVILLE, Penn., Aug. 16.—The county and borough authorities have scaled the political wall that Chief of Police Umstead declares barred the way to prompt action in apprehending the leaders of the mob that burned Zach Walker, the negro murderer of Special Policeman Edgar Rice on Sunday night in Newlin's Hollow, and arrested three men to-day on the charge of murder in the first degree.

The prisoners are Joseph Scofield, special policeman for the Conestoga Traction Company; Norman Price, a steel roller in the Worth Brothers Company, and George Stoll, a clerk in the gas works rolling mills here. Schofield was arrested on evidence obtained from several young men of the town to whom he talked rather freely, according to the police. His accusers say that he boasted that he was one of the first to reach the negro's beside in the Coatesville Hospital. Price is said to have made a similar boast, although he stoutly denies seeing Walker burned.

Price is said to have confessed that he heard the plotters making their final plans in the Brandywine Fire Company's headquarters in Main Street on Sunday, and at their request accompanied them to the hospital. According to the police he said that he entered the hospital, followed the mob to Newlin's Hollow, and saw the lynching, but did not take any active part.

These arrests occurred shortly before 4 o'clock to-day. Previous to that Chief Umstead made a wrathful reply to the numerous questions regarding his sincerity in this investigation. He said that politics was blocking justice, and that the citizens of the town were not aiding him but rather hindering him. He likewise fired a broadside into District Attorney Gawthrop, which, whether justified or not, had the satisfactory effect of starting the wheels of justice spinning and real action transpired within an hour.

Shortly after the arrest of Scofield, Price, and Stoll, J. M. Leachy, Superintendent of the Parkesburk & Conestoga Traction Company, which employed Scofield, communicated with James Pugh, a merchant, in an effort to obtain the release of Scofield on bail.

Mr. Pugh got in communication with District Attorney Gawthrop and informed the official that he was authorised by Mr. Leachy to offer bail in the sum of from $100 to $50,000 for his release. Mr. Pugh was told that Scofield and the two other prisoners were being held under charges for an unbailable offense. Mr. Pugh will be one of the pall bearers who will officiate at the funeral of Edgar Rice.

Mr. Gawthrop, Chief Umstead, and the other county and borough officials were in conference for a short time early in the day and then sent for Kennedy Boyd, the Conestoga Traction Company lineman, who was arrested last night. Boyd was brought before them and was told that he was suspected of being one of the ringleaders. Boyd not only proved that he was not implicated in the crime of Newlins Hollow, but refuted every charge of complicity that the young District Attorney sought to fix upon him, and was released.

Mrs. Myrtle Gibson, who lives in a farm house on the brow of a hillock at the side of the hollow, where Walker was burned to death, was another witness. Mrs. Gibson's home made an admirable view point from which to see the work of the mob on Sunday night and she was asked to tell whom she saw. What she told the officials remains a secret.

The District Attorney and Chief Umstead declared however, that the arrests yet to be made will startle the county. They imply that several of the most respected citizens of the borough will be locked up.

REWARD FOR JEWEL BAG.

Mrs. Lichtenstein Missed It After a Trip to Brighton Beach.

E. B. Lichtenstein of 850 West End Avenue is advertising in THE TIMES today for a jewel bag lost by his mother last Sunday. The bag was tied around her waist. It contained a valuable pin, set with two diamonds, $30 in money, and a storage receipt for two fur coats. Mr. Lichtenstein will pay $150 to the person who returns the bag.

Mrs. Lichtenstein was one of a party on a Brighton Beach express on Sunday, and she found when she reached the shore that the bag had been lost. The police at Brighton Beach were notified. It is thought that the property was lost on the train on the trip out, about 5:30.

STRUCK BOTTOM AND DIED.

Fate of 8-Year-Old Boy Who Dived at Coney Island to Divert a Crowd.

Eight-year-old Obert Emanuel, son of Victor Emanuel, an ice cream manufacturer of 471 Neptune Avenue, Coney Island, entertained a large crowd of woman and children by spectacular diving from the end of a jetty at the new municipal baths at the foot of Ocean Boulevard yesterday afternoon. Suddenly, after one of his dives, the boy failed to reappear. John McMonigle, the chief life guard, at once put out to the point where the boy had disappeared, but he failed to find him until half an hour later, and then only his lifeless body, about 20 feet off-shore. The boy had struck the bottom with his head.

Physicians from the near-by White Cross tent worked in vain for half an hour to revive him. The body was removed to the Coney Island Morgue and later to the home of the boy's father.

AIRMEN NEAR DEATH IN CHICAGO FLIGHTS

Stone Drops Into Lake and Gill Is Caught Under Machine, but Both Live.

PERILOUS TESTS OPPOSED

Aviators, Unnerved by Deaths, Protest, but Carry Out Programme — Johnstone's Father Condemns Exhibitions.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Arthur Stone, falling into Lake Michigan with his monoplane at the aviation meet here just at dusk to-day, narrowly escaped a death like that of St. Croix Johnstone, who was drowned yesterday. He swam nearly a mile and a half before he was rescued by a passing motor boat, after his life had been despaired of. Howard Gill, another airman, whose baby Wright machine toppled over upon him just after a landing and pinned him to the ground, was not far from sharing the fate which overtook William R. Badger, who was crushed by his engine a little while before Johnstone was drowned. Gill, however, managed to extricate himself unhurt.

All the airmen were nervous as a consequence of yesterday's tragedies and serious consequences were feared also when Lincoln Beachey, after being driven far to the south and fighting his way back above the field, glided 3,000 feet to the earth, after his engine had stopped suddenly, and again when James Ward had a hard fight in his machine to make his way back from far out over the lake. Both men fortunately landed safely.

Three other accidents in which the aviators narrowly escaped serious hurts to-day are said to explain the fatal mishap which overtook Badger. The depression into which Badger fell to his death seems to cause a whirlpool in the air. C. P. Rodgers, Oscar A. Brindley, and A. L. Welch darted into this unseen danger and were slammed to the ground. Two of the machines were badly damaged, but the flyers escaped disabling injuries.

Rodgers, Welch, and Brindley were driving Wrights when they came down crashing to the ground, two of them in the exact spot which caused the death of Badger.

A veritable air whirlpool circulated today above the pit which has been marked as a dangerous spot of the committee.

Stone Falls Into Lake.

Stone was entered in the fourteen-mile cross water race to the Carter Harrison crib and back twice. The fifty horse power Gnome motor in the monoplane in which Stone won many races in the East this season was injured in transit to Chicago and has not been working as satisfactorily as could be desired. Consequently Stone was somewhat reluctant to enter the race. When, however, he saw the other entrants wheeling out their craft he got his machine out in a hurry, and was the last of the participants to get away on the long flight across the water. With a roar his machine sprang into the air, and in ten minutes was lost to sight in the mist which overhung the lake. When ten minutes had elapsed and Stone had not reappeared those who knew the speeed of his monoplane began to worry as he had ample time to get back from his water trip.

Soon a report came from the policemen on the shore that his machine had fallen into the lake. The motor boats chartered by the committee were at once rushed to the spot, but when they got there all they found was the wrecked monoplane floating on the water and no trace of the aviator. A report was at once sent in that he had drowned. Stone had, in fact, when his machine got out of his control, jumped into the water with his life preserver buckled about him, and after assuring himself that his monoplane would float, began to swim toward the shore. Men in one of the returning boats heard a voice calling out in the darkness above the roar of the motor, "Let me in. I'm tired of swimming." The boat was at once stopped and Stone was taken aboard.

Mrs. Stone was in front of the Queen Monoplane Company's hangars when it was learned that her husband had fallen into the lake. She clasped her little daughter in her arms and sobbed, "I knew that he would be killed."

Then, "Here take the baby!" she cried. "I'm going out to the lake to help find Arthur." As Mrs. Stone darted out from a group of friends who sought to have her return to the hotel an automobile came in from the lake front and assured Mrs. Stone that her husband had been picked up alive and well. "I'm glad I made Arthur put on that life preserver!" Mrs. Stone exclaimed, her tears quickly drying. "I'm sure it saved his life."

When Stone finally arrived at the hangar he appeared none the worse for his involuntary dip into the waters of Lake Michigan.

"I was not going to wait out there all night for the boats to come," he said. "I was hungry."

Then he asked for the "makings of a smoke."

While a dozen eager hands were offering the airman cigars, paper, and tobacco, he continued his story.

"I was about 3,000 feet in the air," he said, "when I tried to come a little lower and take a long swoop to a lower level. All efforts were useless. I couldn't do a thing with it. The machine began to climb straight up, so I shut off the motor and began to glide to the water.

"When I was about 200 feet from the surface the plane tilted at an awful angle and plunged head foremost toward the water.

"I said to myself, 'You'd better beat it while the beatin's good,' so I jumped out before the plane hit the water and swam to one side.

"Both wings were crumpled up and the main frame, as you call it here, was broken. I stayed long enough to see that it would float for a long time, and then I left for the shore."

Stone's only worry seemed to be about the fate of his monoplane. He had received a brand new motor to install in it yesterday, and he had expected to take his share of the prizes when he put it in to take the place of the crippled motor with which he had been flying during the entire meet.

Gill's Machine Upset.

Howard Gill of the Wright team had just made what seemed a perfect landing when his machine, suddenly checked as if skimmed over the ground at the 40-mile-an-hour speed, toppled over with terrific force. Gill was pinioned for an instant 'twixt tangled wires and taut canvas of the Baby Wright. Before startled spectators had reached him he dug himself further in. The first man at the wreck grasped Gill's hand.

"We thought you were killed," exclaimed the spectator.

"Naw, I'm not even hurt," replied Gill, digging the dirt from his eyes, "but look at this machine. It's a wreck."

Gill probably owes his life to the new feature of construction employed in the Baby Wright biplane. The engine, instead of resting in the rear of the aviator's seat, is fixed to one side. The upset came when the wheels of the machine struck a rut. The skid supports snapped and the machine toppled over headforemost. The Wright mechanics expressed doubt as to the chances of repairing the aeroplane before the end of the meet.

Beachey swept down before the grand stand with a dead engine that had stopped with him at a height of 3,000 feet. He had had a hard fight against the wind from the southwest and almost every one of the spectators was watching him when the propellar stopped. Instead of falling the airship began a long circular glide, so steep that one could see between the planes. The angle became sharper until the aeroplane touched the earth, rolled a few feet, and the aviator stepped down, scarcely injured by the descent.

The effect of Tuesday's tragedies was manifest both upon aviators and spectators. There was a noticeably smaller attendance. Even some of the free seats were unoccupied. On the field and at the hangars the flyers grouped and presented [illegible]

Walter Brookins expressed the feeling of others.

"No individual dare refuse to fly," he said, "his reputation as an aviator of daring and courage would be gone and he would be branded a coward. Every man here feels the loss of Badger and Johnstone, and none wants to go up.

At the starting gun at 3:30 o'clock, when usually a dozen machines are in the air, not one had started. Finally Beachey and Ward got up. Beachey went high in the air and was blown far south. Ward a minute later was blown at a lower level over the lake, whence he returned with difficulty. Parmalee, another of the Wright fliers, rose 100 feet, went half around the field, and descended. For two hours no other flier attempted to rise.

Several events had been called off, and despite the apparent success of Ward and Beachey the pilots still expressed fear of air conditions. Then Parmalee tried to go up again. Twice fitful gusts forced him to descend.

When the race for speed about the course was called, Ovington talked to Chairman Mudd over the telephone.

"You are not going to attempt to have us try the infield course and bank those pylons, are you?"

"That's up to the aviators," Mr. Mudd replied. "They know about conditions."

"Yes, they thought they knew about conditions yesterday," replied Ovington heatedly, "and you know where two of them are to-day. We are willing to fly the lake course, but it means certain death to attempt to bank those pylons."

Following this discussion the aviators went to the judges' stands and as the wind subsided races were run over both pylon and crib courses.

Beachey was an easy winner in the nine-mile race around the pylons, finishing in 9 minutes 28 2-5 seconds; Earle Ovington, second, 9 minutes 49 2-5 seconds; James Ward, third, 10 minutes 41 seconds.

To Beachey also was unofficially assigned the day's altitude record. He reachde a height of 7,076 feet.

Thomas Sopwith won the 14-mile cross-water flight in 17 minutes 2 seconds; René Simon, second, 18 minutes 26 2-5 seconds; Beachey, third, 18 minutes 28 seconds.

AIRMEN ARE INDIGNANT.

Say Meet Should Have Been Suspended—Johnstone's Father Protests.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—The aviators were inclined to criticise the local management for not calling off the programme for the day when Badger was killed. Harry N. Atwood, who is flying from St. Louis to New York, sent identical telegrams to-day to every afternoon newspaper characterising the non-action of the management in this regard as "fierce and uncivilized."

Walter Brookins and Andrew Drew expressed themselves without restraint, while assent to their remarks was nodded by the bystanding airmen.

"We were all unnerved by the accidents," Brookins said, "but we were not signaled to come down, and so continued out flights. There was not an aviator on the grounds who felt fit to handle a machine after Badger's death. We knew him and liked him. Still the programme never halted. No aviator would decline to fly, no matter how shaken his nerves were. If he did he would be called a coward, and his prestige would suffer severely."

Dr. Stuart Johnstone, father of St. Croix Johnstone, the airman who was drowned in the lake after his fall, has given out the following:

I write in protest against this new moloch that is swallowing up so many of the best of our young men. My boy, who never gave his parents a moment's concern and who was as brave as a lion, is dead, a sacrifice to his quality. As a flier he was conservative, studying the art from the viewpoint of the elimination of its dangers. He was a type of a dozen of others who are gone and dozens more now on the brink of the same sacrificial slaughter at this aviation meet, which must suggest to the thousands of spectators a Roman gladiatorial arena. Society should endeavor to prevent this loss. We cannot, you say. Man must conquer the air. It is perfectly obvious that these frail machines will break with a terrible strain put upon them. In the hands of the best mechanician motors will act erratically, break, stop.

Now let the inventive genius that has brought them to their present perfection be attracted toward devising life preserving agencies. Until this is done, in the name of humanity I call on them to stop all public flying and to end further sacrifice.

On the other hand "commercialism" and "dare-devil recklessness" in aviation were scored by Frank X. Mudd, Chairman of the Contest Committee of the meet.

"When this meet was planned," said Mr. Mudd, "everything was thoroughly discussed by a committee, and others and myself were delegated to go to other meets and get copies of their rules. We selected the best of the rules in other contests of the kind and took every precaution to make the flying safe for the aviators.

"After the accidents a committee made an investigation, and from what we can learn both were caused by structural weakness in the machines. The underlying cause, however, was too much sport and dare-devil recklessness. There seems to be too much commercialism and too little science in aviation.

"Our rules provided that in the contests over water the aviators should wear life preservers. We provided life preservers, but, if the pilots refused to wear them, we were not in a position to compel them. Not one of them wore a life preserver, although we requested them to do so. The committee naturally feels the situation keenly, but we feel that the rules are in no way responsible for the fatalities."

Various reasons have been advanced to account for the accidents in which Johnstone and Badger, aviators, met death yesterday.

Horace Wild, aviation expert and field Captain of the Aviation Committee, gave out the following statement last night regarding the manner in which the two men came to their deaths:

Badger was killed as the result of trying to volplane without shutting down his motor. Volplaning is to turn the planes so that the machine descends. In performing it the engine should be shut down to one-half, or even less.

Badger tried to volplane while his engines were running at full speed. The force of gravity draws the machine down with greater force when in position for descending, and the propellers tend to throw the rear part of the aeroplane upward.

When within about thirty-five feet of the ground Badger attempted to right the machine. The enormous air pressure on the planes was so strong, however, that the planes broke and twisted under it. He could not have saved himself, and was dashed to his death. The added force of the churning propellers hurled the machine to the ground with greater speed than if it had merely dropped.

The fate of Johnstone and his machine was due to excessive air pressure in the gas tank. Pressure is needed within the tank to insure a flow of gasoline to the motors, but there was too much in Johnstone's tank, and caused it to explode.

A Coroner's jury, being unable to fix the cause of Badger's death definitely, returned an open verdict, merely stating that death was due to a fall from an aeroplane. Inquest over Johnstone's body was postponed until Saturday.

WILEY TELLS HOW M'CABE BLOCKED HIM

Stripped of All Power in Pure Food Fight, He Says, and Displaced by Dunlap.

GIVES LIE IN RUSBY CASE

Never Saw Letter About Contract Held as Illegal—Appeals Ignored by Wilson, He Declares.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16. Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry in the Department of Agriculture, told the Moss Committee to-day of the successive steps in the process of undermining his authority under the pure food law and thwarting the will of Congress in regard to that measure. He said that he had surrendered practically all of his authority for enforcing the law to Dr. F. L. Dunlap, Associate Chemist, and George P. McCabe, Solicitor of the Agricultural Department. Overruled in two-thirds of the cases he had brought before the Foods and Drugs Inspection Board, composed of these two men and himself, he declared that he had found it useless to appeal to Secretary Wilson, and had not even received an answer to one of the most important appeals he had made to the Secretary.

Dr. Wiley brought out clearly that the Personnel Board had made use of extracts from two letters in the record on which was based the recommendation for the dismissal of himself and three associates in a manner open to severe criticism if the members of the board knew what they were doing. One was a letter from Dr. Kebler to Dr. Rusby, which Dr. Bigelow and Dr. Wiley knew nothing about, and the other was a letter from Dr. Rusby to Secretary Wilson which he never mailed, but finally himself took to the Secretary.

Never Saw Rusby Letters.

This letter Dr. Wiley never saw until it was introduced in evidence before the Moss Committee. The use of this evidence to prove that there had been a conspiracy to deceive Secretary Wilson was the gravest of Dr. Wiley's charges against the board.

Dr. Wiley's testimony began with a few biographical facts and then he was asked:

"Did you take part in getting the Pure Food act passed?"

"A very active part, beginning as a student in Berlin. I worked with the Prussian authorities, and in 1883 printed my first bulletin on food adulteration. I took an active part in food congresses, aided Congressional committees, &c.

"There was constant opposition by makers of adulterated and misbranded foods. The bureau examines samples to decide if they are misbranded or adulterated, and whether they contain deleterious ingredients. These are questions of scientific inquiry.

"My findings were at first certified to by the Secretary of Agriculture. Persons interested are allowed hearings, and if the decision be sustained the case is certified to the proper District Attorney for prosecution.

McCabe's the Deciding Vote.

"This was the original practice. Then came the Board of Food and Drug Inspection of Wiley, Dunlap, and McCabe. It hears appeals as a whole or through some member of the bureau."

"Is Mr. McCabe a chemist?"

"Not to my knowledge. On hearings the majority of this board decided. If Dunlap and I disagreed Mr. McCabe decided."

"And he's not a chemist?"

"Not to my knowledge. The views of the Bureau of Chemistry were sustained in about a third of the cases by the Board of Food and Drug Inspection. When Dunlap and I disagreed I recall no case in which I was finally sustained by the vote of McCabe. In the answer to a certain letter about 'what was rye whisky?' McCabe held with me and against Dunlap. It was, I think, the only such case."

"How many such cases have there been?"

"From 1,500 to 2,000, I should say."

"All chemistry or composition cases?"

"Nearly all—a few were cases of false weighing."

"I have been supported in about one-third of the cases that have come before the Food and Drug Board," said Dr. Wiley. "In some cases I have myself voted with the other two members against the findings of the Bureau of Chemistry after having the hearing.

"I recall but one instance where I have found myself in agreement with the Solicitor as a member of the Food and Drug Board, and that was on the rye whisky case. In fully 100 cases where at first Dr. Dunlap agreed with me, and afterward learned that Mr. McCabe held the other way, he changed his vote against me."

"Did you never appeal from these decisions?" he was asked.

"I found it was useless to appeal," said Dr. Wiley, "for the Secretary invariably upheld the decision of the board."

In two cases, however, Dr. Wiley did appeal to Secretary Wilson against the ruling of the Drug and Food Board. One was as to the use of gluten flour, which is prescribed for diabetic patients as having had a portion of its protein and starch removed. The analyses of this article showed that while the flour under test had been reduced in protein to half the standard strength none of its starch had been removed, and it was, therefore, calculated to do the very injury to those who consumed it that it was expected to remedy.

In another case Dr. Wiley said he found that the Food and Drug Board had practically overruled the regulation of the three Secretaries who under the law were to fix regulations as to articles coming into the country from abroad in regard to sulphur dioxide, used for preserving fruit juices in food for invalids. This action of the board was taken during Dr. Wiley's absence. Dr. Wiley stated that he protested to Secretary Wilson that it was a crime to let sulphur dioxide be put in food for sick people, and told him that he failed to understand how the Food and Drug Board could overrule the three Secretaries.

"What was Secretary Wilson's answer?" asked Representative Floyd.

"I never received an answer," said Dr. Wiley.

"Did you ever talk the matter over with the Secretary?" asked Mr. Higgins.

"He never invited me to do so," replied Wiley.

Other members of the Food and Drug Board never said anything to Dr. Wiley about this matter either.

Dr. Wiley said there were two articles he had joined with the two other members of the Food and Drug Board in sending to the Remsen Board. These were glucose and sulphate of copper. The way Dr. Wiley struggled to enforce the law in the matter of aluminum or alum, which is used for baking powder and in preserving pickles, made an interesting story.

The Food and Drug Board found itself divided as usual as to the harmfulness of the substance. Dr. Dunlap and Solicitor McCabe held that the evidence was evenly balanced among experts in regard to the harmfulness of alum in food. Dr. Wiley wrote them that he would join them in holding that the evidence was evenly balanced if they would agree to suspend the permission to employ alum in foods until the Remsen Board should make its report on the matter. Dr. Wiley said he wrote his views to the other members of the board because he knew in advance that he would not have a vote on the matter unless there was a tie and that did not often happen, Dr. Dunlap and McCabe usually being in agreement.

The question of the deleterious character of alum was referred to the Remsen Board, but no prosecutions for the use of alum in foods have been made and the Remsen Board has made no report, and the consumer is still at the mercy of the manufacturer until that board does report. It had been demonstrated that fruits could be and were prepared without the use of sulphate of copper, yet the Secretary was permitting the use of this poisonous chemical.

"Were your colleagues on this board unfriendly to you?"

"Not in about a third of the cases, perhaps, where I was present. I had charge of all appeal cases, though they all went to Dr. Dunlap to be overlooked."

"Are you ever or under Dr. Dunlap in authority?"

"I regard him as my superior, because in notifying me of his appointment the Secretary directed me to afford him all facilities, quarters, &c., that he might need."

Dr. Wiley was asked at some length if it was possible to get a case before the courts if it was sent to the Remsen Board or if under Order 140 it was sent to be passed on by the Solicitor, and he said he knew of no way, but did not desire to go beyond the authority of his own office in the answer. He said that the Bureau of Chemistry could not get such a case into court.

"Order 140," continued the doctor, "takes all criminal cases to the Solicitor. That is, all those that enter into inter-State commerce. Seizures under the foreign commerce regulations go to the Food and Drug Board. There is no way now for the Bureau of Chemistry to get cases into the courts."

Mr. Floyd referred to the record of the Personnel Board and read the extract in that record from Dr. Rusby's letter to Dr. Wiley proposing a salary of $2,000 a year on condition that Dr. Rusby was to work but 100 days a year.

"I never saw that letter until it was published in the record here," exclaimed Dr. Wiley very promptly.

Mr. Floyd then referred to the Personnel Board's use of this letter in a way to make it appear that Dr. Wiley had received it and had therefore employed Dr. Rusby in defiance of the law.

"That is false. It was never brought to my knowledge," said the witness, and he went on to explain how he had never seen the letter.

The explanation developed that on Jan. 23 last Dr. Rusby wrote Dr. Wiley a letter which he did not mail. This letter, however, was included in Dr. Rusby's files concerning the matter of his employment. When the Personnel Board set about to get rid of Dr. Wiley it called on Dr. Rusby for all his papers, letters, &c., in connection with the matter.

This unsigned and unsent letter was by mistake included in the file sent to the Personnel Committee. It had never been seen by Dr. Wiley. He never knew of its existence till the record was printed in the present inquiry, and then, making inquiry, learned that it had been written, unsent, and included in the file by mistake. This is the letter relied upon to convict Dr. Wiley of deceiving the Secretary and perpetrating a fraud on the Government. The letter proposed a salary of $2,000 a year for Dr. Rusby for 100 days of seven and one-half hours each, "if approved by the department."

"Those words, 'if approved by the department,' show," said Dr. Wiley, "that Dr. Rusby never intended to keep the proposition secret from the Secretary and that I had no knowledge of the letter. There is not a scintilla of evidence in this case connecting me with this contract. That letter was never sent out of Dr. Rusby's house. He brought it himself to the Personnel Board. When they asked him for all the papers in the case in his hands I went before the Personnel Board, and if this letter was mentioned I did not hear it."

"Did you ever receive any communication from the Personnel Board giving their findings?"

"Oh, yes, I got their final report, giving me the privilege of resigning," said Dr. Wiley with asperity. "I was greatly obliged to them for that little courtesy."

"Did you get the report after it had been sent to the President?"

"Yes, and after it had gone to the Attorney General. I won't express any opinion as to the Attorney General."

The Wiley case was discussed at an informal meeting of the President's Cabinet to-day. It is understood that the entire situation in the Department of Agriculture was gone over thoroughly. President Taft is not yet ready to announce his decision in the case.

McGillicuddy Forfeited Constitutional Defense by Giving Bail.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Representative D. J. McGillicuddy of Maine, who was ejected from a New York, New Haven & Hartford train at New London, Conn., Monday, when he refused to show his sleeping car ticket because he had been denied porter service, is undecided as to the course he will take in the case. The Maine Representative, who resumed his seat in the House to-day, is quoted as saying:

"I'm busy here in Washington, and it may be that I will forget the whole matter and forfeit my cash bond, which I left behind me in New London."

Representative Asher Hinds, former parliamentarian of the House, reminded him that the Constitution of the United States forbids the arrest of Senators and Representatives while "going to" sessions of Congress, but it is generally believed Mr. McGillicuddy waived his constitutional privileges by giving bail.

SECRETARY WILSON IS 76.

Oldest Member of Taft's Cabinet Has Held Office Since 1897.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson, who is the oldest member of the President's Cabinet and who has held his portfolio since 1897, a longer period than any other Cabinet officer in the history of the Government, to-day observed the seventy-sixth anniversary of his birth.

Secretary Wilson was born Aug. 16, 1835, in Ayrshire, Scotland, which was also the birthplace of Robert Burns.

Mr. Wilson came to this country at the age of 16, with his parents, and after a brief residence in Connecticut settled in Tama County, Iowa, combining farming with politics. Before entering McKinley's first Cabinet Mr. Wilson served in the Ohio Assembly and was three times a Representative in Congress. He is absent on a vacation, which will include a series of lectures on agricultural themes.

ATTACKS THE BOURNE BILL.

Anarchy, Says Heyburn, to Ask Unanimity on Laws' Unconstitutionality.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Senator Heyburn of Idaho to-day renewed his attack on the Bourne bill which would make a unanimous decision of the Supreme Court necessary to declare a Federal or State law unconstitutional. He declared the adoption of such legislation would be "anarchy pure and simple," and that his purpose in trying to prevent the second reading of the bill and its reference to any committee was to let the country know that "such proposed legislation could not go unchallenged."

Senator Root of New York expressed the opinion that the bill never would be acted upon favorably by any committee, but agreed with Senator Bacon of Georgia that it should at least be considered by the proper committee. It was then sent to the Judiciary Committee.

ALASKA COAL FRAUD LEADS TO ARRESTS

Bullock and Hueston Held for Conspiracy to Defraud Government Out of $50,000.

RECALLS JARVIS'S SUICIDE

Latter Shot Himself When Delegate Wickersham Exposed Him—Guggenheim Company Involved.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 16.—On an indictment charging him with conspiring to defraud the United States, returned at Tacoma Saturday by a Federal Grand Jury, John H. Bullock of the firm of Lange & Bullock of this city and formerly President and General Manager of the John J. Besnon Company of Seattle and Alaska, was arrested at noon to-day at his office in the Beck Building by Deputy United States Marshal Becker. He was released an hour later on $2,500 bonds.

Charles E. Hueston of Seattle, who was Vice President of the Pacific Coast Coal Company, who was indicted at the same time as a party to the same conspiracy, was arrested in Seatle at 4 o'clock, and later released under bond.

The indictment is based upon a coal contract made in 1908 between the Besnon Coal Company of Nome and the United States Government for supplying about 4,000 tons of coal for use at Forts Davis and St. Michael, near Nome, Alaska, and Fort Liscum, near Valdez, Alaska. The specific charge is that a conspiracy was entered into by the representative of the coal company whereby an exorbitant price was exacted, by means of which a sum aggregating in the neighborhood of $50,000 was realised by the deal.

The Government was compelled to pay $28 per ton for coal at the two forts during 1908, although coal was being sold at retail in small quantities at $18 and in large quantities at $17.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The attention of the Government authorities was first drawn to the alleged conspiracy between the managers of the two coal companies charged with dividing profits of a contract for supplying coal to army posts in Alaska by an affidavit by H. J. Douglas, formerly manager for the Guggenheim Syndicate.

This affidavit was made May 23, 1910, in Washington, D. C., and forwarded by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska to Attorney General Wickersham, who was recently charged by the delegate with paying no attention to it and shielding criminals in Alaska. The original parties to the conspiracy were John H. Bullock, manager of the John J. Besnon Company, and D. H. Jarvis, manager of the Northwestern Commercial Company.

Jarvis committed suicide when he learned that Delegate Wickersham had exposed him.

The contract was for 4,000 tons of coal for Forts Seward and Liscum, and the price was $28 per ton. The bids were opened at Fort Vancouver, Wash. Both men had sworn that they were independent in their bids. The coal was delivered in the Summer of 1908, and Bullock paid for the Besnon Company, which got the contract, $6,700 to Jarvis for the Northwestern Commercial Company.

There is evidence of the agreement of the two managers to divide profits. The Government lost by the transaction $50,000.

The matter was taken up by the District Attorney recently on instructions from the Department of Justice following the agitation by Delegate Wickersham here in Washington. The House Judiciary Committee only yesterday reported the resolution he introduced calling on the Attorney General for all the papers and documents in the various cases of wrongdoing of members of the Guggenheim Syndicate and Government officials in Alaska, and the House adopted it. Delegate Wickersham left here two weeks ago for Seattle and Alaska.

FAVORS BIG GUNS FOR PEACE.

Lord Charles Beresford Scouts the Idea of a British-German War.

The peace of Europe is best maintained by big navies, is the opinion of Lord Charles Beresford, who arrived yesterday in the Olympic. Lady Beresford accompanied him. They are of a party made up of Lord Desborough, former Governor General of Australia; the Duke of Sutherland, and the Hon. Arthur Stanley. The Duke of Sutherland's steam yacht Catania, now chartered by Col. Robert M. Thompson, was waiting off the White Star pier for them when the Olympic came along side.

It was in reply to a question regarding the make up of the British navy that Lord Charles Beresford gave his opinion:

"I do not think it is arrogance to say that the peace of Europe depends largely upon the strength of the British fleet," he said. "Peace is for the interest of all and is the greatest interest the powers of the world have to consider.

"The idea of war between England and Germany is ridiculous. Diplomacy will always prevail to prevent such a thing."

Asked about the veto bill he said the reform of the House of Lords was a necessary step to meet modern requirements. He added without comment that the House of Lords will have to be distinctly reformed. He was asked which was the greater fighting ship, our new Delaware or the British Dreadnought.

"That is a question of patriotism," he answered diplomatically.

The Duke of Sutherland's yacht will take the party to Canada, where the Duke owns land regarding which he is considering an irrigation scheme. The party will then go to the Pacific Coast and then to Mexico, where Lord Beresford has property.

MURDERED PARENTS FOR LOVE OF CHILD

Giuseppe Ribis and His Wife Wanted to Keep Little Nephew and Court Favored Them.

DEL BOSCOS STOLE HIM BACK

Then the Uncle Shot Them Both and Also Another Son—An Alleged Act of Adoption.

The Sicilian idea of settling disputes by an appeal to the arbitrament of private vengeance caused a double murder in Brooklyn yesterday. Rafaelo del Bosco and his wife Rosario, who defied an order of Supreme Court Justice Scudder by kidnapping their own two-year-old child, lie dead in the Brooklyn Morgue. Giuseppe Ribis, the child's uncle, who instead of trying by a legal method to recover the child committed to his care, spent last night in the Raymond Street Jail, lodged in a padded cell, deprived of all articles which might be used in an attempt at suicide. He faces a charge of murder in the first degree.

Ribis, who is 50 years old, entered the del Bosco barber shop at 700 Washington Avenue, Brooklyn, about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon and demanded the return of the child, Nicholas, a chubby, brown-eyed little fellow, who was playing on the floor in the rear of the shop, at the feet of his mother, who was sewing on some baby garments for another expected child.

Del Bosco answered that he would pay Ribis, who was his wife's brother, for the money he had expended on the child's keep while he had been in his uncle's care, but declined to give him up. While the two men were arguing Mrs. del Bosco made a motion as if to pick up the child. At this Ribis drew his revolver and fired three times, felling her. Del Bosco sprang at him, and Ribis shot him through the head. Rocco del Bosco, the nineteen-year-old son of the barber, who had been in the rear room, stepped out, and as he entered the shop Ribis discharged his fifth and last cartridge and wounded him in the thigh. The murderer then ran out into the street.

Ribis ran from the shop toward Bergen Street. Patrolman Leonard ran to intercept Ribis, drawing his own pistol. Ribis leveled his revolver and ran straight at the policeman, snapping the trigger ineffectually. In another moment Leonard overpowered him and took him to the station house. On the way the policeman and his prisoner were followed by an angry crowd of shouting Italians, among whom were most of the murdered man's neighbors on the block between St. Mark's Avenue and Prospect Place.

Ribis and his wife were childless, and Mrs. Ribis pleaded with the del Boscos to be allowed to have the child. Nicholas, saying that her husband was drinking and gambling and she believed that if she had the little boy she would be able to keep him at home at night. As Mrs. del Bosco was then too ill to care for the infant, she gave her consent. Since that time, it is said, the Ribis family went through some form of adoption as regards the child.

A week ago the del Boscos made a demand on Ribis for the return of Nicholas, but were confronted with the so-called adoption papers. They retained a lawyer and brought habeas corpus proceedings in the Kings County Supreme Court. The matter was argued before Justice Scudder. It was shown that the Ribises had had the child for some time, and Justice Scudder ruled that he would allow it to remain with them, giving the del Boscos permission to renew their application later.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Ribis took the child to visit its grandmother at 6 Denton Place, Brooklyn, and the two women left him before the house while they were within talking. When Mrs. Ribis got ready to go she found that the child had disappeared. She went home and told her husband. He immediately suspected what had become of it, and promised his wife that he would bring it back to her. He left the house yesterday as usual and she knew nothing of his purpose to then demand the return of the child.

Little Nicholas was sent to the rooms of the Children's Society on Schermerhorn Street.

LITTLETON HAS TRUST BILL.

Proposes a Commission of Fifteen to Study Remedies and Laws.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Representative Martin W. Littleton will introduce tomorrow his bill for the creating of a commission to study a remedy for the trust evil. It proposes a commission to be known as the Industrial and Corporate Commission, to consist of fifteen members—five Senators, to be chosen by the Senate; five Representatives, to be chosen by the House, and five citizens, to be chosen by the President of the United States.

This commission is to inquire into the practices of the corporations that are engaged in inter-State commerce and report at the earliest date practicable with the amendments, if any are advisable, to be made to the Sherman act. This commission will have the co-operation of the Bureau of Corporations by order of the President and will make a thorough study of the law on the subject in Germany and other countries, and will be empowered to send for persons and papers and to compel the attendance of witnesses.

The bill will be referred to the Committee on Judiciary of which Mr. Littleton is a member. Mr. Littleton has no idea of getting consideration of the bill this session, but hopes that it will give impetus to the present desire to get at the matter in some form. He says he believes that the moment that a corporation steps across a State boundary with its business the general Government should confront it with the admonition that it has entered the Federal domain and must now comply with Federal laws. These should impose the fullest publicity.

"Every corporation should live all the time in a glass house," said Mr. Littleton to-day, discussing the measure.

After that there would be strict prohibition of stock watering and fair play all around between competitors and consumers.

One of the most important subjects that would come before such a commission is the idea of Federal taxation of corporations, which would correspond to the heavy taxation that Germany imposes on her trusts. In this country the States would be jealous of any effort on the part of the general Government to share in the taxation of corporations.

LAST CALL ON MEN'S & YOUTHS' SUMMER SUITS

Getting rather late in the season, but never too late for you to buy at such price concessions as mark this semi-annual clearance.

The man who buys to-day can save from $3.00 to $13.00 on a suit that will last him the balance of this summer (and there is plenty of summer yet to come) and the whole of next summer, too.

And he will be getting a suit made to the regular Macy standard as distinguished from the average sale suit, which is not a regular line, but a "special" got up for cheap selling.

Come in as early as you can, so as to get the best selection. Though there are plenty of big values to go 'round, as big values are all we have.

Great Success of the GIMBEL FUR SALE

Is Based on Our 69 Years' Experience

Frankly, we were very much gratified with the enthusiasm which greeted this Sale. We shall reinforce the Sale each day so that everyone will be afforded as good selection as those who came first. We have a large reserve, for we purchased many of the skins in foreign markets some time ago, and have had them made into garments to our especial order—many in our own workrooms. Incidentally, this is one of the reasons why we are enabled to present the lowest prices we believe have ever been quoted in New York for Furs of such fine quality.

But, after all, it is our untarnished reputation covering sixty-nine years that has gained the confidence of our patrons.

NEGRO POLICEMAN HAZED BY SILENCE

No Violation of Discipline, so Officers of Sixty-eighth Street Station Can't Help It.

BLACK MAN UNCOMPLAINING

Doesn't Expect to be Taken in Arms and Treated Like a Brother—Stays Alone When on Reserve.

New York's lone colored policeman, Samuel J. Battle of 27 West 136th Street, has not grown less lonely since he was assigned to duty for the first time at the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station on June 28. Ever since his appointment there the big brawny negro, who worked his way up from a porter and waiter, through a common and manual training school course until he passed the civil service examination for policeman, has been treated by his fellow-policemen with great and icy silence.

There is, of course, no official discrimination against the colored patrolman, nor do the officers at the station seem to encourage the silent treatment of him. But the very fact that a white policeman has nothing to say to a colored policeman is not a matter for discipline at the hands of the officers. As one of them said yesterday:

"There isn't a Captain or any other official in the department who can make one man talk to another or punish a policeman for merely holding his tongue."

Battle himself, according to Capt. Palmer, has never complained that he was getting unfair treatment, and the Captain, as well as other officers at the station, denied yesterday that there was any unfairness in the treatment accorded him as a policeman.

"He keeps to himself and reads pretty nearly all the time he is on reserve," said Capt. Palmer yesterday, "while the other men while away the time in playing dominoes, checkers, or handball, and in taking shower baths in the cellar. I have several times stopped him to inquire how he is getting on with the other men, and whether he has any complaint to make against their treatment of him. But each time he told me he had none.

"'Of course,' he explains, 'I don't expect the men to talk to me and take me in their arms as a brother.'

"He is a good sensible negro, and his conduct is above reproach. I have been able to discover nobody with whom he has had a quarrel or disagreement or who has annoyed him. Of course, what personal prejudices there may be manifested toward him I cannot know, nor could I prevent it. He seems to know what he bargained for in taking a place on the force."

Battle has been assigned to a post at Manhattan Square. So far he has achieved no "record," having made no arrest. It was expected at first that he would be assigned to duty in the turbulent San Juan colored belt which falls in the precinct, but as one of the officers pointed out yesterday this was deemed unwise, in that it was felt the negro population would have more respect for white policemen than for a policeman of their own race.

At present Battle patrols his beat from 3 to 11 o'clock P. M., after which he is off duty for sixteen hours, except every third day, when he puts in eight hours of reserve at the station. These eight hours are the ones in which he is thrown most intimately among his fellow-policemen. The other men usually spend them in playing games in the back room of the station, or in gymnastic exercises, or bathing in the cellar, or sleeping in the room up stairs. As many as twenty-five reserves are crowded together in as many beds in a single room. Sometimes, under still more crowded conditions, it is found necessary for two men to sleep by turns in the same bed, but Capt. Palmer said yesterday that that is not now the case at the station. At all events, Battle has no partner for his bunk.

Several policemen attached to the station were asked on the streets yesterday how the men get along with their colored brother. One and all of them moved quickly away, replying:

"Go and ask the Captain or Lieutenant."

Battle himself, unwilling apparently to idle around more than is absolutely necessary in the station, appears there each day only a few minutes before the set hour of beginning duty. Then he walks briskly in, silently salutes the officer at the desk, and passes on to the far end of the rear room.

A reporter stopped him yesterday to ask whether it was true, as reported, that some of the policemen had insulted him by calling him offensive names. He denied this, but when asked whether it was true that his comrades at the station were subjecting him to the silence treatment, he replied:

"I have nothing to say about that, Sir."

Battle was appointed to the police force after some difficulty. He passed the mental examination prescribed for patrolmen by the Civil Service Commission in June, 1910, after the civil service surgeons had already passed him as physically fit. In September he was called to Police Headquarters and examined by police surgeons, and a few weeks later was informed that they had rejected him. A letter protesting against his rejection was sent by negroes to Mayor Gaynor just about the time of Commissioner Cropsey's trouble with James Creelman of the Civil Service Commission over the appointment of patrolmen not sanctioned by the Civil Service Commission and the Commissioner's enforced resignation. Battle was again examined by surgeons and passed.

He has remarkable physical development, is 6 feet 2 inches in height, and weighs 185 pounds. He says he has never been ill a day in his life. Before his appointment he worked from 7 A. M. to 7 P. M. each day as chief attendant at the Grand Central Station, carrying on his studies at night. For a time he worked as a waiter in a restaurant at Yale, and he took, in addition to a common school training at Newbern, N. C., where he was born, a manual training course at the Boardman School. He lives with his wife and family at 27 West 136th Street, and is now twenty-eight years old. His parents were both born in slavery, but his great-grandfather, he says, shouldered a gun at the time of the American Revolution and fought beside his young master.

PROBATE OF WILL REFUSED.

Testament of Dying Woman Leaving All to One Person is Set Aside.

Surrogate Fowler refused yesterday to probate the will of Anne L. Mooney. The will was dated the day she died, Nov. 17, 1910, and was to supersede one made on May 19, 1910.

In her first will Miss Mooney left a large amount of money to be used for masses for the repose of her soul, and many bequests to charity. In the second will she left her entire estate to a Mrs. Shaughnessy.

Miss Mooney was dying when the second will was executed. She was unable to speak, and it was testified that the entry was made by the lawyer guiding her hand. Mrs. Shaughnessy's name did not appear in the will, being referred to in the document as "you," and the testimony was that "you" meant Mrs. Shaughnessy. But the Surrogate said:

"When it came to the signing of the paper at the end thereof it appears that the lawyer, without any request from the alleged testatrix, but of his own initiative, as he says, took up the useless left hand of the sick woman, placed the pen in her right fingers, and in this way was affixed her mark.

"As we remember, there is evidence of disinterested persons to the effect that at the time Miss Mooney had not regained her faculties, and since her second stroke she was never herself again, but a mere dying mass of inanimate clay. What is the difficulty in regards to execution in this? The proofs are [illegible] made the paper offered [illegible]

HELD FOR KILLING WOMAN.

Boy Sobs When Coroner Winterbottom Tells Him Mrs. Malcheode is Dead.

James Cullen Henderson, the sixteen-year-old boy from San Antonio, Texas, whose revolver fell from his pocket while he was buying a newspaper in Park Row and was discharged, killing Mrs. Rosa Malcheode on Tuesday, was arraigned yesterday before Coroner Winterbottom on the charge of homicide. The tall, lanky, mild-mannered lad with a bewildered expression on his face, was led into the office and no one spoke until he was seated.

"Henderson," said Coroner Winterbottom, breaking the silence, "you are charged with homicide. What have you to say?"

"Oh," wailed the boy, his face paling and his entire body shaking, "did I kill her? Is she dead?"

As the Coroner nodded assent the boy sobbed incoherently of home and mother and his own folly. When his energy was spent he leaned on the arm of Policeman Finnegan, who, putting his arm around the youth, begged him to cheer up.

There was no further questioning of the lad, the Coroner simply announcing that he must hold Henderson in $2,500 bail, in default of which he was locked in the Tombs.

"Poor boy," said Coroner Winterbottom, "coming to New York to make a man out of himself and his whole career blighted on his first day in the city."

From the corridor the boy's cry, "Oh, mother! What will mother say!" was heard as the door swung shut.

The Coroner decided that he would hold no formal investigation until the boy's mother had arranged for a lawyer, but the testimony was taken of a few men who had seen the shooting. George Cersown, a cook of 160 Bleecker Street, said that he was standing in Park Row, near the Federal Building when he heard a shot and saw two men run toward City Hall Park. He said that Henderson did not resemble either of these men. George Fistel, a peddler, of 202 South First Street, Brooklyn, said that he was selling books near the newsstand where Mrs. Malcheode was shot when he heard a loud report, which he thought was the explosion of an automobile tire. He also saw two men running away, and was certain that neither resembled Henderson.

Patrolman Finnegan testified that the boy held the revolver in his hand inside his coat pocket when he arrested him. He said also that Henderson had told him that he was in the habit of carrying the weapon in the palm of his hand, only partially concealed, and that he had held it thus when he bought the newspaper from Mrs. Malcheode. The revolver was fully loaded, one cartridge shell being empty. Coroner Winterbottom, after an examination of the weapon, expressed the opinion that Henderson's explanation of dropping it was true.

The newsstand, 21 Park Row, where Mrs. Malcheode and her children sold papers to help her husband, a bricklayer, earn a living for the family, was closed yesterday. All the other newsboys knew that Mrs. Malcheode had died in the Hudson Street Hospital, and in the neighborhood of the City Hall the shooting was the main topic of conversation.

"All about the shooting in Park Row!" "Big murder!" was the cry that could be heard in the vicinity of Tuesday's tragedy, but Mrs. Malcheode's newsstand was idle. None in all that crying mob of competitors would dare occupy it.

ESCAPES CONVENT AND WEDS

Young French Girl Marries Dr. Baldwin Who Had Attended Her.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 16.—Stealing away from the Notre Dame Convent at Marshall, Mo., just before taking the veil for life, Miss Roma Romine, a pretty French girl, 18 years old, was married in Omaha to-day to Dr. Beecher B. Baldwin of Elkhorn, Neb. Dr. Baldwin and his bride left Omaha to-night for a trip abroad.

The marriage was the culmination of a romance begun only two weeks ago when the young people first met. Miss Romine was placed by her father in the Notre Dame Convent as soon as she arrived in this country, several years ago. She was this Fall to have taken the veil for life.

Two weeks ago she became ill. Dr. Baldwin who was in Marshall was called to treat her. Both young people fell in love with each other and an elopment occurred, Miss Romine climbing the high wall of the convent last night. The doctor met her, brought her on to Omaha, and the two were married to-day.

COLLINS SENTENCED TO DIE.

Negro Slayer of Policeman Lynch Hears His Doom with a Smile.

Judge Mulqueen, in General Sessions, sentenced John W. Collins, a negro, of 347 West Thirty-seventh Street, yesterday, to die in the electric chair during the week beginning Sept. 18. Collins was convicted last Friday of the murder of Policeman Michael J. Lynch on the morning of July 1 last.

When Collins was arraigned for sentence he showed the same remarkable calmness which marked his conduct during the trial, and he smiled when the death sentence was pronounced upon him. Once he lifted his hand and calmly brushed a speck of dust from his coat sleeve. After Judge Mulqueen had sentenced him the negro turned to the two prison guards, to whom he was shackled, and said:

"All right, boys. I am ready to go."

Judge Mulqueen, in sentencing Collins, said:

"You killed a brave man, Collins, a man who meant you no harm; an officer who was fearlessly doing his duty. He was a type of the policemen who make up the magnificent police system of this great city. I take this opportunity to commend publicly the conduct of the police who arrested you, for they could easily have wreaked vengeance upon you for the death of their brother officer. Instead, at the risk of their lives, they protected you from an infuriated mob."

Collins was convicted of killing Policeman Lynch just as he was entering the former's rooms in Thirty-seventh Street to learn the cause of two revolver shots which the negro had fired out of a window. Collins had been drinking heavily, and on the night of the murder entered the house and fired two revolver shots at the janitor. Later he left the house and returned with a bottle of gin. After drinking most of the gin he fired two shots in the air, and told a woman who was with him to lock the door. Instead she ran into the street, shouting for help. Policeman Lynch appeared and Collins shot him in the head.

Collins then ran up a flight of stairs and engaged Policeman McDonald of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station in a revolver duel. He made his escape across the roofs of the houses to a house in Thirty-eighth Street, where Policeman West of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station, found him hiding under a mattress.

SAY TRUST RUINED THEM.

Court Rules That Simon Brothers May Show This in Their Suit.

Judge Noyes refused yesterday in the United States Circuit Court the application of the American Tobacco Company, which is a defendant with the Metropolitan Tobacco Company to a suit brought by Louis, August, and Samuel Simon, tobacco brokers, Third Street and Broadway, to have certain allegations stricken from the complaint.

The plaintiffs allege they were forced out of business on May 1 because the American Tobacco Company entered into an agreement not to sell any of their products to jobbers in this city or Newark except through the Metropolitan Tobacco Company or its constituents. They assert that they have been damaged to the extent of $300,000, and under the Sherman Anti-Trust act claim three-fold damages.

The court held that notwithstanding the dissolution decree by the Supreme Court against the Tobacco Trust, the Simon brothers possess the right to show the growth of the monopoly which they allege broke up their business. Counsel for the American Tobacco Company admitted that the motion to strike out many paragraphs was made to avoid the creation of an unfavorable atmosphere and [illegible] the framing of the defendant's

MARCUS BRAUN SPENT NIGHT IN A CELL

Caught in Gambling Raid, East Side Hungarian Leader Hid His Identity.

THEN POSED AS A REPORTER

Discharged in Court with Others—Claims Distinction as a Handshaker of Presidents.

Marcus Braun, President of the Hungarian Republican Club, who, among the Hungarians of the lower east side, passes as only a little lower than the angels because he has shaken hands with two Presidents and dined them at east side restaurants and whose political power was popularly believed to transcend that of any Police Captain in the district, spent Tuesday night a prisoner in the East Fifth Street police station as a result of a gambling raid by the police on the Waldorf Club at 224 East Fourteenth Street. The misfortune of the friend of two Presidents formed the chief topic of conversation on the lower east side all day.

Ten men were taken prisoners when Sergt. Ray and seven policemen battered their way into the clubroom, where they found two roulette tables and other gambling paraphernalia. One of the men, who gave his name as Morris Brown and said he was a reporter and lived at 229 East Sixty-eighth Street, and another, Thomas Raynor, 1,719 Madison Avenue, were at first charged with keeping and maintaining the resort, but later all the charges were changed to common gambling. Braun, under the pseudonym of Brown, was apparently not recognised; and, failing to get any of the many bondsmen who would readily have run to the assistance of Braun, friend of two Presidents, was obliged to spend the night wretchedly in a station cell.

It was only in the Essex Market Court yesterday morning that real reporters recognized in the prisoner Marcus Braun, shaker of Presidential and many other hands, one-time Immigration Investigator, and "tipster" to newspapers. Braun is also one of the wardens of the port, having been appointed to that post by Gov. Hughes.

Taxed with his identity, Braun admitted the soft impeachment, but insisted to reporters that he had played no part in the alleged gambling, but merely stopped in the place "in order to collect a little bill." To the police, on the other hand, they say, he insisted that he had a perfect right to be there or anywhere else in his capacity as a "newspaper man."

"As a newspaper man of twenty years' standing in this city I have a right to go anywhere I please in the pursuit of my profession," he said.

Fortunately for the "newspaper man," the police were unable to testify to having seen anyone except Raynor engaged in the operations of the raided room, and all the rest, including Braun, were dismissed by Magistrate Freschi.

It seemed almost incredible on the east side yesterday that Braun, despite his enormous "pull," should have lacked a bondsman and had to sleep—if sleep it could—in a cell. Some of his friends, however, pointed out that Braun was ever a very self-important man, and probably preferred to stay in the station rather than let his friends know that he had suffered the indignity of arrest.

They told of the high honors that Braun had enjoyed in the past; how, as President of the Hungarian Republican Club, he had presided at a great dinner to President Roosevelt in the Little Hungary Restaurant with 426 admiring guests present, and how, a few years later, he had served in a similar exalted capacity at a dinner to President Taft in the Café Boulevard, to which he himself had brought from Hungary, from a lake near Budapest, a splendid cargo of imported fish called "fogash" and dear to every Hungarian palate.

It was through the personal influence of President Roosevelt, who said he considered Braun a "useful citizen," that Braun was appointed a special investigator of immigration some years ago, with a mission to investigate in foreign lands the character of immigrants coming here and to hold back the undesirables. While in Budapest he was mistaken for a spy by a Hungarian detective. Braun discovered the detective going through his papers at a hotel, and straightway, feeling that in him, friend of Presidents, the dignity of the United States had been insulted, slapped the detective's face. For his resort to force he was arrested and locked up. He appealed to the State Department at Washington and narrowly missed becoming the object of an "international incident." As it was, however, Braun was released and the incident closed.

Returning to this country, Braun was appointed an Inspector of Immigration and sent to Ellis Island. He balked, however, at wearing a uniform as prescribed by the Commissioner of Immigration, and rather than bow to that indignity, resigned. He is still associated with the Liberal Immigration League, of which he was one of the founders.

Braun's dignity came into play several times in the past, before and after his rebellion against wearing the uniform at Ellis Island. Once he lost an election bet by the terms of which he was to have wheeled a well-known doctor up Second Avenue in a wheelbarrow. The physician expressed himself willing to be wheeled about, but Braun, according to east side gossip, found that Mrs. Braun objected to his figuring in a spectacle so ludicrous. So he refused to shove the wheelbarrow, but treated the physician and a large party of friends instead to a theatre party.

FOR KILLING DR. BENDER.

Babcock, Who Drove on the "Joy Ride," Charged with Homicide.

William H. Babcock, 26 years old, 822 Chauncey Street, who was arrested on Tuesday, charged with running down and killing Dr. Herman William Bender, 863 Bushwick Avenue, while he and several comrades were on a "joy ride" in a touring car, was arraigned yesterday morning before Magistrate McGuire in the Gates Avenue Court. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of homicide and was held without bail for an examination to-morrow.

The automobile which killed Dr. Bender, the police have learned, belonged to William Hartfield, President of the Italian Navigation Company, who lives at 448 Riverside Drive, Manhattan. He is at present in Italy, but, according to a relative, the machine was taken from the garage by the chauffeur, Babcock, without permission.

The police traced the automobile and driver through a small boy, who had recognized Lawrence Birmingham, 21 years old of 1,124 Halsey Street, as one of the four men in the car. Birmingham, when questioned by the police, said that Babcock was the driver of the car. While the police know the names of all in the car on the night of the unlucky ride, no other arrests, it is said, will be made.

Birmingham admitted to the police that the car had struck an elderly man and said that the car was going so fast at the time that it was impossible to stop it.

SAYS SHE HAD NO HEARING.

Woman Defendant in Divorce Suit Telegraphs Asking Delay.

Supreme Court Justice Ford received a telegram yesterday from Mrs. Don Adele Williams, applying for delay in the signing of the referee's report in an action for divorce brought by John D. Williams. Mrs. Williams in her telegram said that she had never asked for a referee, never wanted one, had no hearing, and never saw the referee. She also said that she was about to retain new counsel.

Roger Foster was appointed referee to take testimony in the case, and last week his report was laid before Justice Ford for confirmation. Up to yesterday the Justice had had no time to look over the papers, and they are still on his desk. On the application to confirm the referee's report no one appeared for Mrs. Williams and the case was submitted on default. William Klein was her attorney, and William Chilvers, counsel to the Sheriff, appeared for Williams.

LESSON OF "TRIANGLE" FIRE.

Senator Wagner's Commission to Begin Its Inquiry To-day.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, President pro tem. and majority leader of the State Senate, announced last night that a meeting of the Legislative Commission to investigate the conditions under which manufactures are carried on in cities of the first and second class in this State would meet at 11 A. M. to-day, at Room 500, 165 Broadway.

This commission was created by a bill passed by the Legislature this year, at the request of the Fifth Avenue Association and other civic bodies in this city. It is made up of both the majority leaders in the Legislature, Senator Wagner and Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith, and Senator Charles M. Hamilton of Ripley, and Assemblyman Edward D. Jackson of Buffalo, Assemblyman Cyrus W. Phillips of Rochester, and four members appointed by Gov. Dix, as follows: Samuel Gompers, Miss Mary E. Dreier of Brooklyn, and Simon Brentano, and Robert E. Dowling of Manhattan.

Immediately after the disastrous fire in the Asche Building, there was a popular demand for legislation to avoid any possible repetition of that kind of calamity. The commission will look into the laws and ordinances now regulating the erection, maintenance, and supervision of factory buildings, to the end that legislation may be enacted as soon as possible to "eliminate existing peril to the life and health of operatives and other occupants."

Senator Wagner said last night that the commission intended to get to the meat of the matter as speedily as possible. The Legislature appropriated $10,000 for the expenses of the commission. It will endeavor to have its report ready, on or before February next.

Proprietor of Cafe Martin Talks of Plans for New Resort.

J. B. Martin of the Café Martin, returned yesterday from Europe on the White Star liner Olympic, after visiting the exposition in Turin, Italy, to acquire novelties for the coming season. To a TIMES reporter he said that his greatest surprise on his arrival was to find that business in the New York restaurants this Summer had exceeded that of any previous year.

"I expect to be ready to commence work in a few weeks," said Mr. Martin, "on my new $1,000,000 restaurant in Times Square, which will be modeled on the lines of the Pré Catalan, in the Bois de Boulogne at Paris. The plans are all ready and during the next few days I shall go over them with architects and the partners who are with me in the enterprise. There will be no change in the present café.

THE HARVESTER

By Gene Stratton-Porter

—Author of—

"The Girl of the Limberlost," Etc.

"The Harvester" is a man of the woods and fields, who draws his living from the prodigal hand of Mother Nature herself—selling the medicinal roots and herbs and barks, the wild mushrooms and so on, which are his for the gathering. If the book had nothing in it but the splendid figure of this man, with his sure grip on life, his superb optimism, and his almost miraculous knowledge of nature's secrets, it would be notable. But when the Girl comes to his "Medicine Woods," and the Harvester's whole sound, healthy, large out-door being realizes that this is the highest point of life which has come to him—there begins a romance, troubled and interrupted, yet of the rarest idyllic quality.

ROSTAND BADLY HURT IN AN AUTOMOBILE

His Machine is Overturned and He is Pinned Beneath It at Bottom of Ditch.

INTERNAL INJURIES FEARED

Physicians Attending the Poet Unable as Yet to Determine How Serious His Condition Is.

BIARRITZ, Aug. 16.—Edmond Rostand, the celebrated poet and dramatist, was the victim of a serious automobile accident near here to-day. To-night he lies in his villa at Cambo-les-Bains surrounded by physicians, who as yet have been unable to determine what the outcome of his injuries is likely to be.

M. Rostand is suffering from serious contusions of the head and body, and it is feared that he is also injured internally.

M. Rostand was motoring from Cambo-les-Bains to St. Jean de Lux, accompanied by his chauffeur and a mechanic, when his machine skidded on a curve in the road, leaped into the air, turned over, and fell to the bottom of a fifteen-foot ditch, pinning the poet beneath it. His companions were unhurt and worked desperately, but vainly, to raise the car and release the imprisoned man.

Finally, finding their efforts of no avail, they rushed off for help, while M. Rostand, in great agony, lay crushed and bleeding beneath the upturned car.

Shortly afterward the chauffeur succeeded in enlisting the aid of farmers and M. Rostand was extricated and rushed to his villa for medical attention.

The poet is 43 years old.

LECONTE NOT RECOGNIZED.

This Country Awaits Assurances as to Foreign Investments.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The United States Government will protect American investments in Haiti and will not formally recognize the election as President of Gen. Cincinnatus Leconte, the revolutionary leader, until it has received assurances that he is not antagonistic to the extensive American interests in the republic. This was learned at the State Department to-day.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Aug. 16.—President Leconte to-day took the oath of office before Congress and a great assembly.

AGAIN GUARD MEXICO BORDER

Our Troops Ordered to Patrol Lower California Frontier.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—A renewed patrol of the California frontier by United States troops, abolished only a short time ago, was ordered to-day by the War Department because of the threatening situation just south of the border in Lower California, Mexico. A company of coast artillery at San Diego was instructed to take the field for patrol duty from San Diego to Yuma, Arizona.

Mexican rurales are now proceeding to Tijuana, traveling over American territory with the concent of the United States Government, for the purpose of suppressing the trouble in Lower California.

EARTHQUAKES IN PORTUGAL.

Considerable Damage Done in the South and Some Persons Injured.

LISBON, Aug. 16.—There was a series of earthquake shocks, gradually increasing in violence, in Southern Portugal late last night.

At Mertola, Albufeira, and other points near the coast considerable damage was done and some persons were injured. The frightened people rushed from their beds to the street. The first tremor continued for ten seconds.

At Lagos the disturbance was accompanied by a tidal wave, which caused a panic among those living near the coast.

Goes to Jail for Contempt.

Karl Wilder was committed yesterday to Ludlow Street jail until he makes a settlement with Joseph W. Spencer, trustee for Selig Kelzer, a bankrupt furrier who before December, 1909, was in business at 50 East Ninth Street. Judge Molt had signed the order for the arrest of Wilder for contempt of court. Seaman Miller, the referee ordered Wilder last May to give up assets which are valued at $7,501. Wilder was arrested on Tuesday at Liberty, Sullivan County.

FAINTS FROM LOST BLOOD.

Youth Who Underwent a Transfusion Operation Collapses in Subway.

Four weeks ago Charles Lichtmaker, eighteen years old, was strong and robust. He was a clerk in a hardware store. Then his employer went out of business, and young Lichtmaker was out of work. But his landlady, Mrs. Vogelsang, was kind to him and let him board at her house, saying that he could pay what he owed her when he got another place.

Every day Lichtmaker went downtown and to Brooklyn to seek work, but in vain. Finally he owed Mrs. Vogelsang $25.

One day last week he answered an advertisement offering $25 for a person to give his blood for a transfusion operation in Mount Sinai Hospital, and was chosen of 150 applicants. When he handed his landlady the money she told him that he was foolish to waste his health.

Yesterday, while waiting for a Subway train in the 149th Street station, he fainted and was taken to Lincoln Hospital. There it was found that the wound in his wrist had reopened and that he had lost much blood. He will remain there until his strength is restored.

Miss Greenbaum of 581 West 161st Street, the patient into whose veins a pint of young Lichtmaker's blood was forced, died soon after the transfusion.

Two-base hits—Merkle, Bates. Three-base hits—Snodgrass, Meyers. Stolen base—Fletcher. First base on errors—New York, 1; Cincinnati, 2. Left on bases—New York, 3; Cincinnati, 2. Double plays—Mathewson, Fletcher, and Merkle. Struck out—By Mathewson, 5; by Suggs, 3. Base on balls—Off Suggs, 1. Hit by pitcher—By Suggs, 1, (Merkle.) Umpires—Messrs. Rigler and Finneran. Time of game—One hour and twenty-eight minutes.

Little by little Christy Mathewson is learning to pitch. If he sticks at it long enough perhaps he will make a name for himself. "Matty" pitched against the Cincinnatis at the Polo Grounds yesterday. It was really the turn of Drucke, the reliable, steadfast Texan, whose great work in the box has done much to put the Giants where they are to-day—down where they are, not up. But at the last minute, it was decided to give Drucke a much-needed rest and send young Mathewson to the mound for a work-out. And absorb the information from your wise uncle, Horace. Matty, ol' boy, delivered. The score was 6 to 1.

It's about as hard for "Big Six" to beat the Reds as it is for a centipede to crawl. He has beaten them twenty-two times since he has been pitching for New York, and they have yet to get the count over him. He was in rare form yesterday, twirling as well as he ever did in his life. During the whole game Matty pitched only ninety-two balls at the Cincinnati batsmen. With perfect support from his team mates his performance would have been even better. In the first seven innings Matty pitched only sixty balls. His control of the ball was absolute, and not a Red got a pass.

He allowed only two hits, one of these a single by Mitchell in the fifth inning and the second a double by Bates in the ninth which scored Bescher after he had reached first on Fletcher's error. Mathewson's performance of throwing only ninety-two balls establishes a record in the National League. The best previous record known in the majors for nine innings is 103 pitched balls, but a couple of weeks ago a minor leaguer, "Flame" Delhi of Los Angeles, won a nine-inning game, pitching only seventy-five balls.

The Giants concentrated all their attack in the fourth inning when they fell upon Suggs savagely and in a shower of six hits drove six runs across the plate. Two of the wallops were triples by Snodgrass and Meyers. Larry Doyle started the tempestuous round with an infield hit, planted in fertile soil, near first base. On a hit and run play, Snodgrass drove a triple between the right and centre meadows, scoring Doyle. Becker's single scored Snodgrass. Merkle was hit by a pitched ball. Herzog spanked a grasser to left field, scoring Becker, while Merkle traveled to third. Fletcher grounded to Downey and Merkle was run down on the way to the plate, Downey, Clarke, Grant, and Suggs figuring in the play. Meyers smote the ball mightily to deep centre field, scoring Herzog and Fletcher. The Indian scored when "Matty" smashed a single to left. Devore forced "Bix Six" at second and Larry Doyle, up for the second time in the same inning, skied to Attorney Eddie Grant.

Cincinnati could do nothing with Mathewson's service. In the first four innings they went out promptly, one after the other in quick order. Mitchell opened the fifth inning with a single, Downey forcing him at second. Egan hit into a double play which snuffed all Cincinnati hope, Matty to Fletcher to Merkle. With one out in the eighth inning, Downey grounded to Fletcher, who missed the ball's easy bound. Egan forced Downey at second, Herzog to Doyle, and Grant was the means of killing off Egan at the second station, Fletcher to Doyle.

Clarke bunted in the ninth inning, but Matty scooped up the timid rap and threw him out at first base. The Cuban slugger, Marsans, was sent in to bat for Suggs, but he fell victim to three sweeping curves which Matty dropped over the plate. Bescher banged the ball on the lawn to Fletcher, who gathered it correctly, but made a throw to first which pulled Merkle off the bag and the runner was safe.

Johnny Bates, aided by the sun, saved the Reds from a whitewash. He banged the ball to left field, which would ordinarily have been a short single. Devore lost the ball for a moment in the sun's bright glare and consequently was slow in fielding it. Bescher, who can run like a deer, saw the delay and galloped on home while Bates went to second before Josh got the ball back. Hoblitzel raised a high rocket over Wilson's head for the third out.

Bresnahan Hurt, Magee in Game.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—Philadelphia bunched hits with fielding and battery errors by St. Louis to-day and easily won the game, the score being 10 to 2. In trying to touch out Lobert at the plate in the first inning, Bresnahan was badly spiked on the right wrist, and he will probably be out of the game for two weeks. Although Bresnahan dropped the ball, he and several of the visitors protested O'Day's decision allowing Lobert to score, and the former and Huggins were ordered off the field by the umpire. Sherwood Magee played his first game since July 10, when his assault upon Umpire Finneran caused his suspension by President Lynch. Score:

Donovan's Fine Pitching Earns Victory for Detroit Team.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Detroit won the final game of the series from Chicago to-day in a batting bee by the score of 8 to 2. White, who was hit hard, gave way to Benz, a recruit, who worked in fine style, but retired in favor of Young, who was pounded hard. Donovan was in fine form and held the locals to four scattered hits, a base on balls and a triple saving the Chicagoans a shutout. McConnell and Jones made spectacular one-handed catches. Score:

BROOKLYN GETS ONE MAN ON FIRST BASE

Elmer Steele traveled to the gates of no-hit town at Washington Park yesterday and just when it seemed that he would take his place in baseball's hall of fame his ambition was shattered. Tex Erwin was the guilty party with a solid slam which bounded over second base, just out of Miller's reach, the drive coming after the first Superba had been retired in the ninth inning. Up to that time not a Brooklynite had seen first base as Steele's control was just as perfect as the support which his mates were giving him in the field. After Erwin got his hit he was held on first base and the two Superbas who followed him went out as peacefully as the twenty-five who had gone before. Brooklyn never had a chance to win and the Pirates' walked up an easy victory, 9 to 0.

Steele did not shine as a strike-out expert, getting only two of the Superbas during the nine innings, but he had the Superbas hitting into the fielders' hands all the way. On two or three occasions Dahlen's men threatened to break into the hit column before Erwin finally did the trick, and each time the Pirates did some sensational fielding which turned the prospective hitter back to the bench. Wilson in right field was the star of the fielding division. He took care of eight chances which covered a territory from the infield to the fence and from the foul line far into centre field. Two of his catches were as sensational as any seen at Washington Park this season. He backed to the fence and pulled in a drive by Hummel in his gloved hand in the fifth inning and in the ninth he again traveled to the bulwarks, jumped into the air, and returned to earth with a prospective double by Zimmerman safely encased in his mit.

Up to the time game began the main attraction on the field was Marty O'Toole, the $22,500 pitcher, recently purchased by the Pirates from the St. Paul club. Marty indulged in a little pitching practice, which seemed to hold the attention of both players and fans, and then he went to the outfield for a little work.

Bunched hitting pushed the Pirates far to the front, while Steele was tying the Superbas to the ground. Knetzer was reached for ten hits in four different innings and each time one or more runs resulted. Every one of the ten bingles figured in some way toward pushing a Pirate around the paths.

Pittsburgh salted the game away in the first inning. Byrne led off with a two-bagger to left field, and after Clarke had flied to Hummel, Carey pushed a double-decker into right field, chasing Byrne home. Wagner singled to right, scoring Carey, and Hans took second on the throw-in. He injured his ankle turning at second base and had to leave the game, McCarthy taking his place. Miller's slam to centre field pushed McCarthy across, but "Dots" went out in a double play when McKechnie filed to Davidson.

For the next three innings the Pirates went out meekly, but they unloaded more trouble in the fifth. Gibson walked, Steele fanned, and Byrne hit to right field, pushing Gibson along to third. Clarke's single almost cut off Knetzer's leg and Gibson trotted home. Carey's out put Byrne on third and Clarke on second and both counted when Zimmerman threw McCarthy's grounder to the bleachers.

Tooley's error and successive singles by McCarthy, Miller, and McKechnie, together with a wild pitch by Knetzer, accounted for two more Pittsburgh runs in the eighth inning. Steele's single, Barger's error, an out, and a sacrifice fly brought in the last run in the ninth. The score:

HAL B., JR.'S, $3,000 STAKE.

Victor in Fort Erie Grand Circuit Feature Wins in Straight Heats.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 16.—The Fort Erie Stake for 2:10 pacers, the feature of the opening day of the Grand Circuit stars at the Fort Erie, Ont., track, went to the Canadian-owned horse, Hal B., Jr. Easson drove the son of Hal B. to victory in straight heats. Mark Knight, who chased the winner under the wire in the first heat, pulled up very lame in the second heat and was drawn. The Canadian horse was the favorite.

The upset of the day came in the first race, when Baron Alcyone beat Lee Wilson. The money went in on the Wilson gelding, but he broke badly in the first heat and just escaped the distance flag. Baron Alcyone won the heat, yet the players held to Lee Wilson. In the second heat Wilson again went to a break, but caught up quickly and raced home with the Baron, winning by a length. In the final heat, which was won by Baron Alcyone, Lee Wilson was the only real contender, the other starters getting the distance flag.

Robert Mirrol, second in the Tavern "Steak" at Cleveland, won the Dominion of Canada Stake in straight heats. Gordon Todd, with the veteran Geers in the sulky, got second money from Mary G. Rain fell in the last heat of the 2:06 pace, which went five heats. Major Brino, the favorite, after dropping the first two heats to King Cole, won the race handily. The summaries:

HANS WAGNER HURT.

Pittsburgh's Great Ball Player Will Be Out of Game Three Weeks.

Pittsburgh's chances of carrying off the 1914 pennant in the National League materially decreased yesterday when Hans Wagner received an injury which necessitated his retirement from the game between Pittsburgh and Brooklyn at Washington Park. An examination showed that the ligaments had been torn and a small piece broken off one of the small bones near the right ankle. Dr. W. D. Scanlon, the Brooklyn pitcher, who assisted in the examination, stated last night that Wagner would be out of the game for at least three weeks. As Wagner is the mainstay of the Pittsburgh team and the league's leading batsman, his loss will be severely felt.

The accident happened in the first inning. With Carey on second base, Wagner hit to right field for a single. The ball was thrown to the plate in an effort to catch Carey and Wagner continued on to second base. As he stepped on the corner of second base his right ankle turned and he went down. Realizing that he had been badly hurt, Wagner called to Umpire Brennan to call time, which he did. The players of both teams gathered around and after a short delay Hans was carried to the Brooklyn clubhouse. Dr. Scanlon, after a hurried examination of the injury, advised Wagner to go to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital on Fifth Street, where an X-ray photograph could be taken.

Wagner had brought his own automobile with him on the trip and it was quickly pressed into service. At the hospital the injured ankle was photographed and Wagner was advised to return to his hotel. Instead of following this advice Hans directed the chauffeur to return to Washington Park, where he remained until the game was over.

Wagner's value to the Pittsburgh team in the grueling fight for the pennant now going on between Chicago, Pittsburgh, and New York can hardly be overestimated. In spite of his long service, the Teuton still ranks as the kingpin of the National League and his enforced absence for the next three weeks may possibly end Pittsburgh's hopes of winning the pennant. McCarthy, the youngster who succeeded Wagner in yesterday's game, will look after the short field position for the present. He is a capable fielder, but he cannot be compared to Wagner in batting. Hans has been hitting above the .350 mark for some time.

NEW HAVEN'S POLO CUPS.

Cooperstown Four Defeated in Final Game for Watch Hill Trophies.

Special to The New York Times.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 16.—In the National polo tournament to-day on the grounds of the Point Judith Club, New Haven defeated Cooperstown in the final match for the Watch Hill Cups by the score of 6¼ to 3¾.

The playing of C. C. Rumsey and Malcolm Stevenson of the Cooperstown four was a feature of the event. Agassis and Crane also put up a good game for New Haven.

The second event on the programme was a match between Aiken 2d and Point Judith 3d for the Novices' Cup. Miss Emily Randolph was Captain of the Aiken four and played with her usual dash and good direction. Point Judith 2d beat Aiken 2d by the score of 4 to 3. The line-ups:

Meadow Brook Magpies Win.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16.—With Berger's band playing, flags flying, and tea served under a tent, the largest gathering present in seven years, polo this afternoon, came to its own again in Newport. The game was between Meadow Brook First and the Meadow Brook Magpies. The contest was one of the finest played here in years. The Magpies won by 13½ to 11¼, but were allowed six points handicap. TEN MILE RIVER.

THE TIMES urged three months ago that Ten Mile River, in Connecticut, be tapped to replenish with its 100,000,000 gallons daily this city's depleted water supply. Its advice, which was the advice of eminent engineers, was scouted and flouted by Water Commissioner THOMPSON as unthinkable and impossible of execution. Mayor GAYNOR and Commissioner THOMPSON announced yesterday that, by beginning operations now, the supply from Ten Mile River can, three months hence, be utilized and a famine may be averted.

We should be better assured if the emergency plans had been adopted in May. Weather Forecaster SCARR had declared that a deficiency in the average rainfall, which was appreciable since 1903, then showed so low a reserve that the city would surely suffer, even though the present available supplies were swelled by unwonted rains. We hope that the 37,000,000,000 gallons stored in the Croton watershed, said to be enough to last four months, is all of it potable. Of course when a certain low level is reached in the reservoirs the water becomes thick with impurities. The responsibility for the prompt and safe replenishment of the supply rests with Commissioner THOMPSON.

THE RIGHTS OF THE SENATE.

There is some obscurity, it seems, as to the rights of the Senate under the British-American arbitration treaty. When the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee voted to strike out the section as to the High Commission of Inquiry, it was on the theory that the Senate would be compelled to submit to arbitration any question which the Commission decided, by the votes of all or all but one of its members, to be arbitrable. Mr. TAFT, in his defense of the treaty, appears to hold the same view.

We do not ourselves so read the treaty. Article III. of the treaty says that when the High Commission reports in this manner that a difference comes within the scope of Article I., that is, that it is justiciable, then "it shall be referred to arbitration in accordance with the provisions of this treaty." But the provisions of the treaty in Article I. are that as to every case there shall be a special agreement on the question whether the difference shall go to The Hague Tribunal, "or to some other arbitral tribunal," which special agreement shall provide for the organization of such tribunal if necessary, define the scope of the powers of the arbitrators, the question or questions at issue, and settle the terms of reference and the procedure thereunder.

If, therefore, it is decided in any case not to send a difference to The Hague, there must be a special agreement as to the tribunal to which the difference is to go, that agreement must "decide the scope of the powers of the arbitrators, the question or questions at issue, and settle the terms of reference and procedure thereunder." That agreement must be submitted to the Senate. We do not see what more the Senate could wish.

But since this is not the interpretation accepted by the Senate Committee, or conceded by the President, there remains the question of the real duty of the Senate toward the treaty as they read it. Here they are altogether on the wrong track, as it seems to us. They certainly have the power to accept this treaty. If they do accept it they will greatly advance a good cause, and they will incur no risk for the country. Arbitration will still be decided by the High Commission of Inquiry, and in disputed matters there must be an affirmative vote of at least five of the Commissioners, including two Americans. Is there the least chance that the rights and interests of the country will not be amply protected? There is talk of the danger of the Monroe Doctrine being submitted to arbitration. It could be so submitted only with the votes of two out of three American Commissioners. It is no more imperiled than the terms of the European concert, or the treaty relations of Great Britain with France, or Canada, or Japan. If Great Britain can [illegible] one danger, why this is no greater reason for [illegible] their love cause. We ask sentiment that with time and development may be thought, the Senate will see that the essential provisions of the treaty are safe and wise and incalculably beneficent.

HONESTY AND THE CHARTER.

With honest men in office, an honest man in every office, we can get along under any charter, even under the proposed new charter. It is therefore quite beside the point for Commissioner of Charities DRUMMOND to assure his fellow-citizens that he holds his business reputation "as a sacred thing." Commissioner DRUMMOND'S business reputation is spotless. It is quite beyond reproach. Nor is it necessary for Mr. DRUMMOND to disclaim membership in Tammany Hall. In fact, we are willing to admit that every holder of an office under this administration is as straight as a string when it is stretched, and that not one of them could find his way to Tammany Hall, even on a moonlight night.

But this charter was not made for honest men, it was not made for men like Commissioner DRUMMOND, who has no relations with Tammany Hall. The authors of the charter did not expect that it would yield its fruits of spoil and loot under the present administration. It was deliberately contrived to fit future conditions, when possibly there will be dishonest men in office. Perhaps Commissioner DRUMMOND will recall that in the past dishonest men have occasionally, in one way or another, eluded the vigilance of the electorate or passed undetected the challenges of the appointing power. It is because such things may happen in future that the charter ought to be killed dead. For it has been dishonestly compiled, with the intent to yield its desired fruits under the administration of dishonest men. We do not say that the chief compilers of the charter, the men who are willing to avow their work, are responsible for these crooked provisions. The "jokers" were doubtless slipped into the instrument without their knowledge. But they are certainly there.

It is no defense of the charter, therefore, for Mr. DRUMMOND to insist that the system which permits the Commissioner of Charities to disburse $5,000,000 a year to private charitable institutions on his sole audit is a safe system. To be sure, his records would show all his commitments to these institutions, and the records of the institutions would show the same commitments. He seems to think that is all that is necessary. It is all that is necessary under the administration of an upright Commissioner like Mr. DRUMMOND. But suppose we had a Commissioner who was not upright, one who was disposed to make improper use of the funds subject to his disbursement and audit. It would be easy to make his records correspond perfectly with the institution records, yet both sets might be false and fraudulent. These disbursements have sometimes fallen under suspicion. A Commissioner of Charities who holds his reputation sacred should not take the risk of passing the certificates on to the City Treasury audited only by himself. He ought to insist on an entirely independent audit.

The proposed charter opens the way to abuse of power, to waste, and to peculation. It is difficult to escape the conclusion that the provisions against which objections have been raised were deliberately inserted with that purpose.

THE CANADIAN CAMPAIGN.

It is hardly an occasion for surprise that the campaign after the dissolution of the Dominion Parliament is of the same character as before dissolution. Ostensibly reciprocity is the issue, but there is nothing the Opposition likes less to talk about or to vote about. Even when the Opposition thinks it is debating reciprocity it has nothing to say about the currents of trade and the economic advantages or disadvantages of consuming food products and working up raw materials near where they are produced and without enhancement of cost by the collection of hostile tariffs.

These are the things the Government speakers discuss when they discuss reciprocity, but when the Opposition approaches the same theme the talk is all of politics. Reciprocity spells annexation, and instead of trade topics the orators discuss the advantages of Continentalism versus Imperialism. But it is rare that they get even this close to the issue they compelled the voters to vote about. In Quebec they seek a division upon the navy issue. In the Western provinces they are promising Government operation of the Hudson Bay Railway. And the sins of the Government are contrasted with the virtues of those who want to turn the rascals out more than they want to save the country from "LAURIER and larger markets." On Sunday the first meeting of the campaign in Quebec was one of the largest and most excited ever held in Canada. The white badges of the anti-navy faction seemed about equally numerous with the red of the Government party, but the old-time blue of the Conservative Party was nowhere visible.

In the opinion of the best-informed Canadians, those both detached and authoritative in their judgments, the new doctrine that we must not trade with a man to mutual profit because he may steal our affections is not convincing the people. It seems to them that there is danger of recoil in the argument that commercial union may be, in appearance only, as well answer demand for political union, and somewhat inconsistency between that argument and the alternative argument that reciprocity is destructive. The more logical argument is that there is no necessary connection between trade and politics. If prices and credit are right no American cares whether his customer is a Canadian any more than he cares whether he is a churchman or a dissenter. And if the bargain is otherwise settled it would be off instantly on either side if either politics or religion should be mentioned as part of the consideration. It is no friend of either country who suggests such things in public on either side of the border.

This campaign, like others of our own, suggests the necessity in politics, as in law, of a process resembling pleading, meaning an alternation of assertion and denial by which the parties agree upon what they are disputing about and what are the essentials of the controversy. Finally, all else is eliminated and the trial settles the remaining disagreement and nothing else. We have had platforms which emphasized the tariff, and the people thought and voted about finance. Now in Canada there is no agreement that the parties are divided upon reciprocity, which one party will give and the other will withhold. There is complete lack of joinder of issue, and there is much pettifogging and appealing to prejudice on such issues as are joined. The clearest thing in the situation is that the Government is shirking reciprocity less than the Opposition.

THE WILEY INVESTIGATION.

With the testimony yesterday of Dr. WILEY himself, the Moss committee concluded its hearings. President TAFT will next be heard from. But conditions have changed since Attorney General WICKERSHAM, after reading a cooked-up case, declared that Dr. WILEY and his associates in guarding the foods and medicines of the people merited "condign punishment." Like thunderbolt the illuminating publication that exposed the doings of the McCabe cabal in the Department of Agriculture must have seemed to Solicitor MCCABE and his fellow-conspirators just as they thought their secret charges against the Chief Chemist were accomplishing his ruin. The public now knows that the Food and Drugs act has been officially disregarded; that scores of important cases against alleged adulterators and misbranders have been deliberately held in abeyance; that department officials did not hesitate to garble the terms of court findings, and that an organized effort was being made, by the cutting down of salaries and "star chamber" proceedings, to drive honest public servants out of the Bureau of Chemistry.

It is not imprudent to predict that if, in his decision, President TAFT recommends "condign punishment," the recommendation will not be directed against Dr. WILEY and Dr. RUSBY.

EMPLOYE STOCKHOLDERS.

We have received from Col. H. G. PROUT, formerly of The Railroad Gazette of this city, and now General Manager of the Union Switch and Signal Company of Swissvale, Penn., a statement of the plan recently adopted by that company to encourage and assist its employés to become stockholders. The company's force last year numbered some 3,500, and its stock, par value of $50, sells on the Pittsburgh Exchange at about $86. The plan has been under consideration for a long time, and has been very carefully framed. It is of special interest to the general business community because the company may be regarded as typical of a very large class, each with a field of its own, active and prosperous, but of relatively moderate scope, through which a very large part, probably much the greater part, of our immense and varied industries is carried on. It is by such corporations that the body of workers in these industries are employed, and if a plan of securing to the more diligent and thrifty of these workers a substantial share in the profits and in the ownership of the employing corporations can be worked out successfully there will obviously be a solid and lasting gain for all concerned.

In the case of the Union Switch and Signal Company stock is offered to employés, except executive officers, at $75—that is, at a price $11 less than current market price—in amounts proportioned to pay received. This stock is to be paid for in fifty months, at the rate of 2 per cent. per month, or sooner, if desired. All cash dividends, if one year's payments have been made, are credited to the subscriber. If the subscriber remains in the employ of the company, he receives a "participation dividend" of $5 a year for five years, reducing the cost of his stock to him to $50. No interest is charged on deferred payments; if a subscriber elects not to complete his purchase the amount paid by him is refunded with interest at 5 per cent. In the interest of stability and for the mutual benefit of the company and the employés subscribing to its stock certain considerable advantages are secured to the subscribers who elect that their shares shall not be subject to sale, transfer, or pledge. In case of death or disability the rights of subscribers who have not completed payment are fully protected, and provision is made for suspension of employment. Employé subscribers are entitled to all stock dividends on paid[illegible] and power, or powers, [illegible] of voting on such stock.

This certainly is an extremely interesting experiment. Its authors are confident, after a careful study of all considerations, that it will work out to the lasting advantage of the corporation and its employés. The help given to the employé subscriber is substantial. His payments are small and are extended over a period of a little more than four years without interest; he can, if he chooses, by the simple process of remaining in the employ of the company, secure his stock at a reduction of one-third. At the same time, if he is obliged to give up the subscription, or wishes to do so, before complete payment, he gets his money back with current interest. The company, on the other hand, expects substantial benefits. Steady service is the condition of the reduced cost of its stock. When all payments are completed it is reasonable to expect that employé stockholders will be stimulated not only to faithful and efficient service, but to vigilant advancement in all directions of the interests of the property of which they are part owners. In other words, the arrangement has the supreme characteristic of a "good bargain"; it is good for both parties.

Representative NORRIS'S resolution which provides for the assembling of a Marriage and Divorce Congress from the States is timely. Divorces, declared two years ago to be in the ratio of one to twelve marriages, are now reckoned to be one in ten or nine marriages. Ten times as many divorces, as compared with the marriages, are granted to-day as were had a generation ago, and the ratio increases. Most of them are obtained by mutual consent of the litigants. Under what divorce law, uniform or otherwise, can they be prevented? The question is a hard one to answer, but it is time to continue the study of the problem.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Detective Work Well Done.

That there was nothing miraculous about the way in which the detectives found out who drove the automobile by which Dr. BENDER was run down and killed, should not, and in the minds of sensible people will not, detract from appreciation of the fact that this was an admirable piece of police work, and that Capt. TUNNEY and his two assistants showed in doing it patience, skill, and intelligence of a high order.

They started on their quest with nothing to help them except a description that would fit scores, if not hundreds, of motor cars, and the vague impression of certain witnesses of the "accident" that the number on the car contained the figures 3 and 7. From the reckless speed at which the machine was driven they made one tentative assumption—that its occupants had been drinking and that information concerning them could be found in the saloons along the street by which they came. This assumption proved to be correct. The men had talked as well as drunk in many saloons, and the detectives were soon following a trail which, though it might easily have been missed or lost, led them within a few hours to all the objects of their search.

The case is complete, with evidence and confessions ready for presentation. A particularly good case from the legal standpoint, since the conviction of the culprits would seem to be certain, it is a particularly bad one from every other, since not a single circumstance calculated to aggravate the enormity of the offense committed is missing. That the automobile was on the road at all constituted grand larceny, since the chauffeur was using it without the owner's authorization. His companions could hardly have failed to know this, so that in all probability the responsibility of accomplices rests on them. They were all drinking heavily and, boasting that they could break the speed laws with impunity, they rushed by a standing street car in utter disregard of the high likelihood that exactly what did happen would happen, and they did not turn back to ascertain the extent of their victim's injuries.

If this does not evidence that depravity of mind which under the statute changes an accidental homicide to murder in the first degree, the statute is worthless and should be repealed. Of course, it is not to be expected that RADCLIFF will "go to the chair," as every jury would take into account the absence of an actual intention to kill, but prison, and for a long term, is evidently the place for all of them. A heavy sentence will be at once punitive, preventive, and reformative—all the merits a sentence can have.

New Ills Worse Than Old!

An observer of the new order of things at the Brooklyn Bridge entrance has recorded that the women whom Capt. BOUMER'S Irish gallantry and American ingenuity freed from masculine competition in the rush for the waiting street cars have not thereby escaped the rude contacts incidental to fiercely selfish struggles for seats. If his observations be accurate, the rivalries of the women with each other are more ruthless than those from which they formerly suffered. Instead of entering the cars with grace and dignity, the stronger showing consideration for the weaker, and all the self-forgetting wish to make others comfortable and happy, which is the soul and substance of courtesy, he says that it is each for herself and only a strap to hang from for those of inefficient musculature.

Of course these charges simply cannot be true of all the women involved in the Bridge crushes—not even of all the stronger ones. Such accusations were never true of anything like a majority of the men before Capt. BOUMER took them in hand. Perhaps the observer chose an unfortunate moment for making his study of the Captain's plan, and what he saw was episodic rather than characteristic. Many and many a well-intentioned observer has in that way been led into misinterpretation of what he has seen, and, rashly arguing from the particular to the general, has reached and promulgated wrong conclusions.

It is easily possible to hope that such has been the case in this instance, but to hope is one thing, to be sure is another, though not everybody knows it. And experience sorrowfully whispers of a remote possibility—the possibility that at the Bridge entrance as in a good many other places there are to be seen indications that women are less likely than men to be polite to strangers or considerate of their rights and privileges. Perhaps some little superiority in this respect is due, as men show is due to candor, not to virtue—to the knowledge that they themselves are much more likely to be pushing than pretty ones when their owners [illegible]

Photography Enters a New Field.

Again a French scientist of asserted eminence but unfamiliar name claims to have made a marvelous discovery. This time it is described as the discovery that thoughts can be photographed, and we are told that Commander DARGET, after looking long at a walking stick or a bottle, can turn his eyes on a specially sensitized plate and by an emanation from them or what he calls "V rays" produce on it an image of the object of his recent contemplation.

This may be true, as many statements seemingly almost as impossible as this one have turned out to be. But the photograph of a stick or bottle is not the photograph of a thought, nor is it made one by the fact that the photographer says that he thinks stick or thinks bottle, and thinks it hard, while he glares at the sensitized plate. Indeed, it is hard to see the slightest reason why anybody should expect the thought of a stick or a bottle to look like the one or the other.

But there of course eminent scientists, French or other, do not start with expectations; they leave that to lawmakers, sentimentalists, and three or four—or forty—huge groups of humanity that don't know any better. We do insist, however, that a thought is not what the Commander photographs with his V rays—if he photographs anything with them.

SHORT BALLOT OPPOSERS

Point Out That New Charter Adds Another Elective Office.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Under the so-called Cullen-Foley Charter for New York City, provision is made for an additional elective officer, viz., Secretary and City Chamberlain.

As a general consideration, any further complication of our municipal ballot is to be deplored. It would seem superfluous to point out that any change in this direction must necessarily further dissipate the attention of the voters. Either the important offices which are now chosen by ballot must suffer for a lack of that close scrutiny which is the essence of intelligent voting, or else the new elective office will be placed in a position of complete obscurity. In either case the real selection of officials is thrown back into the hands of the partisan machines. The individual office to be filled will go the way of the successful party. The party organization will thereby be encouraged in the practice of foisting on the electorate a set of inferior candidates for the minor pieces by putting forth strong candidates for the more conspicuous places.

The contemplated change is a distinctly reactionary one in view of the present movement in American cities to simplify the functions of citizenship. The success of the Commission plan of Government, which our present Charter closely approximates, is due largely to the principle of centring responsibility in the hands of a very few elective officials.

Specifically, the choice of City Chamberlain by popular election has little to commend it. The only general municipal officers elected at the present time are the members of the Board of Estimate, the functions of which board are essentially representative in character. The board reflects and determines policies of the administration, and, as such, is very properly an elective body. The Chamberlain, on the other hand, is to be a purely administrative officer, with functions mostly ministerial. The taking over of a portion of the Controller's functions does not alter the case, inasmuch as he would not be a member of the governing board of the city. The office, moreover, is not sufficiently interesting to the average voter to command the attention which its real importance warrants.

The same principles which apply to the office of Chamberlain carry even greater force when applied to the Coronerships. The functions of these officers are in a still greater degree ministerial and consequently uninteresting from the voter's standpoint. Under the Ivins charter they would be appointees of the Mayor, attached to the department of health.

This organization has offered an amendment to the existing Charter, making a proposal very similar to this, which we trust will receive the consideration of the Committee on the Affairs of Cities.

Cent-and-a-Half Postage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is proposed by the Postmaster General to reduce the rate of letter postage from 2 cents to 1 cent per letter. This would appear to be an extraordinary concession. The last reduction of letter postage was from 3 cents per letter to 2 cents—a cut of 33 1-3 per cent. I suggest that a reduction of rates to 1½ cents per letter would be much more reasonable and more for the public interest.

A reduction from 2 cents to 1 cent would either produce a serious deficit, or would necessitate the radical advance in rates on second-class matter, which is advocated by the Post Office Department.

Quite a serious difficulty would be the inevitable flooding of the mails with advertising circulars. Even at the 2-cent rate, advertising circulars are a serious annoyance to many patrons of the Post Office. If the letter rate is reduced to 1 cent, this annoyance will be trebled.

Why not advocate a reduction which will afford a large material relief without increasing the burden or loading the letter mail with undesirable matter?

"Hands Off the Schools!"

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Hands off our public schools!" This is the cry of great multitudes of the citizens of New York—our pride is in our present system of education, free from the pollution of politics, under the direction of thoughtful men, who ask for no remuneration, and are glad to devote all necessary time to securing the best results to the thousands of children in our city. The proposed change has not a single sound argument to rest upon, and while no one questions the honesty of our Mayor, this section of the new charter will radically change our public school system, and will be a serious injury to the cause of education, not only in this city, but throughout our land.

Hands off? That well enough alone. Our schools are doing a magnificent work, and the community is satisfied with the present organization. Dr. ABBOTT E. KITTREDGE.

Crazed by Liquor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What was the explanation of the trouble at Catskills? The news, according to to-day's Times, "had been drinking all afternoon, and was going wild." Who sold him so much liquor?

The crisis of the trouble came, and after that the saloons were ordered closed; meanwhile a State, a Nation, yes, humanity itself, had been disgraced. It is not reported whether the man who sold the negro enough liquor to craze him was one of the leaders of the mob.

The end is not yet—"at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

The Casteeville Lynching.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your comment condemning the lynching of Walker at Coatesville makes the human race your debtor. We have no sympathy for his detestable crime; there should be no attempt at palliation for the criminal. But the lynchers have placed themselves upon a lower plane than the lynched, dishonored the courts, outraged justice, disgraced their country, dehumanized themselves, and insulted Heaven.

NO SLIGHT TO WILSON.

Gov. Stokes Explains How Taft Reception Was Arranged.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The closest scrutiny shall not question the attitude of the Ocean Grove Association toward Gov. Wilson in connection with the visit of President Taft as the guest of the association on Tuesday evening, Aug. 15, make necessary a true statement of the case.

President Taft, through the influence of Gov. Murphy, Congressman Andrus, and other friends of the association, comes to Ocean Grove in a civic capacity as a guest of the association and not of the State. The indefiniteness surrounding the movements of the President, the time of his arrival, the manner in which he would come made it impossible to send out invitations. For that reason only one invitation was sent, and that to the Governor of the State.

Prior to the sending of the invitation I wrote the Governor informally, explaining to him the arrangements were indefinite, that an invitation would be sent to him as soon as we could arrive at a definite plan, and that I wrote him this in advance, knowing that he was a busy man, so that he could arrange his plans to suit his own convenience. As soon as we had any definite information at all the Governor of the State was sent the following invitation:

OCEAN GROVE CAMP-MEETING ASSOCIATION.
Ocean Grove, N. J., Aug. 10, 1911.

Hon. Woodrow Wilson, Governor of New Jersey, Trenton, N. J.

Dear Governor: The committee on the reception of President Taft will deem it an honor to have you meet them at the residence of Mr. A. H. De Haven, 5 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, on Tuesday evening, Aug. 15, at 7:45 o'clock, and will be glad to know as to the time of your coming and how you will come, and if you will want us to send an automobile for you.

An early reply will be appreciated.

Yours very truly,
JOHN E. ANDRUS,
E. C. STOKES,
JAMES L. HAINES,
Committee.
(Signed) H. N. COLE, Secretary.

Every effort was made upon the part of the association and the members of the committee to show the utmost courtesy to Gov. Wilson, and this was done in the best way that we knew how. The Governor's response to my informal letter is couched in the most cordial terms, and I am sure that he fully understands the situation.

Respectfully yours,
E. C. STOKES.

PACIFIC'S WINGED WOMAN

Makes Alternative Proposals of Statuary for California's Panama Exposition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article on "The Pacific's Giant Statue" touches a National matter in which Americans everywhere are interested. Any action in the direction of building a monument to commemorate or signalize Pacific history and affairs awakens the country to its foundations, and San Francisco's attempt, or California's attempt, is a matter of extraordinary importance.

It is easy to see that a great monolith of a winged woman, at once the symbol of victory of American principles in the Pacific, and the National ideal, would be a reasonably safe venture in the commemoration of an event like the merging of two oceans and the making of one theatre for our world affairs. But whatever it is, regardless of the interpretation placed upon it by the citizens of San Francisco who build it, it will be regarded by posterity as an attempt suitably to interpret the meaning and importance of the Pacific Ocean and all its affairs. In this light the announcement that San Francisco has essayed this task in connection with her great and glorious venture at a world exposition is startling and eloquent.

If the present proposal is abandoned for any of the reasons you mention, namely, danger of destruction by earthquake, lack of time for construction for the exposition, &c., other suggestions in line with expediency and utility are in order. Among them I would mention the alternative of a great semi-lune of statuary facing the Pacific from "Lincoln Park," and representing American achievement in that confronting vast, its water and its lands. This statuary might include such subjects as Ledyard before St. Petersburg, Palmer discovering the antarctic continent, Judson at Ava, Perry at Yokohama, De Long in the Delta of the Lena, Ward at Tsekie, &c. Behind this semi-lune let San Francisco build a great Pacific Museum and School of Pacific Commerce as her recognition of the greatness of the Pacific, and her responsibility and the importance of California and the Pacific Coast as a National bulwark against the problems and dangers of the Pacific.

In fact, if it were not too vast a project these sculptures and this institution might form the setting for some large central structure that would not be as perishable in an earthquake as a great monolith.

It would be a pity to imitate New York or any American city. I do not believe it is in the metal of Californians merely to imitate other American neighborhoods. And with her limitless Pacific to draw upon it would be shameful to do so.

Telephone Mouthpieces Dangerous?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

After years of agitation the drinking cups on railroads and in public places have been abolished. The law prohibits, by fine and imprisonment, spitting on sidewalks, in the Subway, and even on the Brooklyn Bridge. The Tuberculosis Committee advertises that careless spitting spreads consumption, diphtheria, la grippe, bronchitis, and pneumonia. And if this is the case, how much greater are the risk and consequences of using the trumpet-shaped mouthpiece of the telephone now in general use, undoubtedly the greatest conveyor of contagious diseases?

It is with a feeling of revulsion that I enter a public telephone booth, as the close atmosphere, the fetid odors arising from the mouthpiece, (which I never find clean,) the thought that hundreds are daily using the instrument, and that the last user may possibly have been a consumptive, whose lips and mouth may have touched the instrument and deposited tuberculosis germs—all conditions so insanitary and against public welfare that it is high time for physicians and spirited citizens to unite in protest against the continuance of this menace to health.

The Muffler "Cut-Outs."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Ordinances of all kinds have been passed relating to automobiles, but regarding muffler "cut-outs" nothing has been said. As an owner and driver of a car, I know it is not necessary to use them in the city, and, if smaller cities like Greenwich, Conn.; New Rochelle, N. Y.; Oneonta, N. Y.; Syracuse, and others, pass and enforce ordinances forbidding the use of the muffler cut-out within their limits, why not New York City?

Would Filter Hudson Water.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Would it not be possible to build a set of pumps and rough filtration plant somewhere on the banks of the Hudson River, and pump water into the present Croton aqueduct?

I am sure filtered Hudson River water is better than no water at all. Besides, the plant could be built in four or five weeks' time and would cost little compared with the Ten-Mile River plan.

TOGO GOES HOME IN GRATEFUL MOOD

Deeply Touched, Says Japanese Admiral, by Cordial Greeting from New Yorkers.

STRUCK BY OUR ENTERPRISE

Believes Our Navy to be Very Powerful—Off to Boston on His Way Home.

Admiral Count Togo left New York for Boston yesterday afternoon, saying he had been deeply touched by the cordiality of the greeting extended to him here.

"My only regret is," said Admiral Togo, "that I cannot find words that will appropriately express the gratitude I feel toward Americans, and New Yorkers in particular."

"Did you feel the effects of the hospitality shown you, did it fatigue you any?" he was asked.

"Not at all; I am accustomed to hard tasks."

"Is there anything that impressed you more than all else—something that stands out in your mind as the result of your visit?"

The Admiral thought a while, smiled, and said:

"The industrial development and the enterprising spirit of the American people."

He was asked if he had formed any impression of the American Navy. His reply was brief. "Nothing specially," he said, "save that I believe it to be a very powerful navy."

The army was Admiral Togo's host the last day he was in New York. Gen. Grant, commanding the Eastern Division of the army on Governors Island, entertained the Admiral at luncheon, after which a reception was held when the officers of the division staff and the others on duty at Governors Island and the posts near New York were presented to the Admiral.

Admiral Togo and his party left on the 5:33 train for Boston in the private car Rocket, which was attached to the regular train. Through a misunderstanding on the part of the chauffeur who was driving the auto in which the Admiral was riding, he was taken to an entrance of the Grand Central Station where no police had been stationed to keep the crowds back. As a consequence, when he stepped from the machine he was almost overrun by an admiring crowd. A number of negro porters attempted to keep the crowd back, but they were unable to do so, and the police detail was rushed from the western entrance of the station, where they were awaiting the arrival of the Admiral. When the Admiral reached the train platform he was greeted by three hearty "Banzais" from a party of 100 of his own countrymen.

As the train pulled out of the station the Admiral stood on the rear platform of his car and waived farewell to the Japanese party.

Just before leaving his hotel the Admiral asked that the motor cycle policemen who have been in constant attendance upon him be sent to his apartments. When they came he shook hands with each of them and thanked them for their efficient work. The men were Frederick Haggerty, Foster H. Zeh, Charles Silberbauer, and John Oxenhurst, all of whom are attached to the Motor Cycle Squad of the Fourteenth Inspection District.

WATER SUPPLY STILL LOW.

Storm of Tuesday Put Little in the Reservoirs—Much Waste Prevented.

The heavy rain which deluged New York on Tuesday did not add an appreciable amount of water to the supply throughout the Croton watershed, according to officials of the Water Department. The rainfall throughout the Croton system was a trifle over one inch, but as the ground was very dry most of this was absorbed and never reached the reservoir.

Commissioner Thompson announced yesterday that figures just compiled by the Engineering Bureau of the department showed the water waste prevention crusade which he is conducting saved to the city in July $5,000 a day, or a total of $155,000 for the month. These figures were obtained by multiplying the total amount of water saved by the regular water rate. His statement says:

The water waste prevention crusade during June resulted in an average daily saving of 39 million gallons over June of last year. During July the crusade was continued with such energy that this figure has been passed—40,000,000 gallons a day. The money represented by this water was saved because it was water which was going to waste. All this has been brought about despite the increase in the population of the city this year over last, from which the department could have reasonably expected an increase in the daily consumption of 10,000,000 gallons.

This brings the actual saving up to more than 60,000,000 gallons a day. Despite this enormous decrease in the daily consumption this year over last year as a result of Commissioner Thompson's crusade, the water revenue taken in by the department during July was over $200,000 more than July of last year, viz., July, 1911, $3,888,617.99; July, 1910, $3,677,253.57.

Commissioner Thompson is confident, from the manner in which the crusade is progressing, that even better results will be obtained this month.

MAYOR FINDS BOOK STUPID.

Thinks That Is Why "Anna Malloon" Was Excluded by the Library.

Mayor Gaynor tried his hand at literary criticism yesterday. In a letter to Mildred Holland, President of the Actors Church Alliance, who had protested to him about the exclusion from the Public Library of the novel of stage life called "Anna Malloon," the Mayor said that he did not find the book immoral, but stupid. This is his letter:

CITY OF NEW YORK,
Office of the Mayor,
Aug. 14, 1911.

Dear Miss Holland: On your complaint that George H. Brennan's novel "Anna Malloon" was unfairly discriminated against by the Trustees of the Public Library, by their refusal to admit it into the library for circulation, I looked it through last night, after trying hard to read it consecutively. I am satisfied that the motion of the author that his book was excluded on moral grounds is erroneous. It is quite harmless, but very stupid. It must have been rejected on that ground.

I cannot help calling to mind that scene of Cervantes in which he pictures the priest, the barber, and the niece sitting in judgment on the books of Don Quixote's library, sparing a few, but committing the others to the flames, and especially the stupid ones. If this book had been there I am certain it would not have escaped the flames. Very truly yours,

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

The plot of the story has to do with a girl who adopts the stage as a profession and finds that she does not have to lose a single virtue to make her living.

Taft and the Wool Bill.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note that it is confidently assumed that President Taft will veto the wool bill because he thinks revision ought to await the investigation of the Tariff Board. He is right as to final revision, but I do not see that this necessarily applies to the present wool bill. It seems to be generally agreed that the wool schedules are too high—the President himself has admitted it. The wool bill will make only moderate reductions, not nearly so much as President Taft might be willing to approve when Commissioner Emory's investigations are done.

If this is the case, and the present wool bill is only a temporary and palliative measure anyway, ought not the President to approve it on the ground that it makes no more reductions than he is now sure ought to be made? Then when Congress meets again and Mr. Emory's report is in such further adjustment as may be desirable may be undertaken. Meanwhile this bill would give some immediate relief from the excessive duties.

NEWPORT IS AGAIN THE HOME OF POLO

TENNIS TOURNAMENT PLANS

President Dwight Has 118 Entrants for Matches Beginning Next Monday—Subscription Dance at Berger's.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16.—Harry Payne Whitney arrived this morning from the Adirondacks for a conference with the polo players at Newport, James M. Waterbury, E. S. Reynal, William A. Hazard, August Belmont, J. A. Rawlins, Arthur S. Burden, and William Goadby Loew, regarding future polo at Newport. As affairs stand now, Newport is to be made the home of polo in the future at the Westchester Polo Club. The lease of the Westchester Polo Club expired last Spring. With the taking over of the grounds at Bateman's Point, many improvements will be added. Horse racing may also be held on the polo grounds next year.

Dr. James Dwight, President of the National Lawn Tennis Association, has 118 letters and telegrams from entrants for the tennis tournament beginning next Monday. He will arrange the drawings Friday. Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, Jr., and Miss Maude K. Wetmore, the Tennis Committee of the Casino, have been away watching some of the vaudeville acts for the tennis players' entertainment at the Casino next Thursday night.

The exciting final round in mixed tennis doubles at the Casino this morning between Miss Anna Sands and her brother, Charles E. Sands, who defeated Mrs. Larger-Wallach and Craig Biddle of Philadelphia, was one of the best matches of the season, although the latter team allowed 15. The prizes were silver cups, presented by Mrs. Joseph Harriman. Mrs. James B. Duke wore a stunning marquisette gown trimmed with Irish lace. She carried a blue silk parasol and wore a large black Gainsborough hat. Mrs. Herbert M. Harriman came in for the match in a riding habit, and Mrs. Paulding Fosdyck wore a lavender princess gown and large white picture hat. Mrs. Ogden Mills, with her daughters, the Countess of Granard and Mrs. Henry C. Phipps, wore lace gowns and large white picture hats with long white ostrich plumes.

Mrs. George Hilliard Benjamin wore a lace gown of Empire effect and a large black hat. She carried a white satin parasol. Harry Payne Whitney came in with E. S. Reynal, J. M. Waterbury, Jr., J. A. A. Rawlins, William Goadby Loew, and William A. Hazard.

Since it became known Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones had engaged the Russian dancers Pavlowa and Mordkin for their entertainment on Sept. 2, agents of many other Russian dancers have invaded the Summer colony.

Berger's Bellevue Lodge was the scene of a pretty and informal subscription dance this evening, which was hurriedly arranged by Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Robert Goelet, and Mrs. Craig Biddle. Everything was arranged in less than half an hour, and the assembly by midnight was large. Dancing was enjoyed until early morning.

MONKEY IN WALDORF BED.

Appropriated Cleveland Man's Pajamas and Made Himself at Home.

D. L. Guthrie, a Cleveland business man who is staying at the Waldorf-Astoria, had an amusing surprise in store for him when he went to his apartment on the ninth floor shortly after midnight yesterday. On entering the room he noticed after switching on the electric lights that the things on his dressing table had been disarranged and strewn all about. The cold cream jar had been opened and the major portion of its contents scooped out and smeared over a hairbrush. Looking toward his bed Mr. Guthrie saw a dark, hairy face on the pillow, with his pajama jacket wound around it like a large automobile veil. He telephoned to the office that something like an animal was in his bed, and McDonald, a house detective, was sent to the room, where he soon discovered the midnight intruder to be a black and white faced ring-tailed Malagash monkey named Dingah, which belonged to a woman guest who has rooms on the same floor.

McDonald, who had been in the East African trade in his seafaring days, where he learned to speak Malagash from the Drum-Drum coast tribe, addressed the Simian by name and said: "I-see-ee-lasim," meaning "Come hither, little lost lamb of the desert." On hearing the accents of his native tongue Dingah bounded out of Mr. Guthrie's bed and turned a double somersault on the floor, where he was captured. He was then taken to the cool seclusion of the cellar.

Assistant Manager Stewart said yesterday that it was a stringent rule of the hotel that no animals of any kind were to be taken to guests' rooms, and that the monkey had evidently been smuggled up in a basket. In future the animal, he said, would live in the celler with the prize Persian cat and the famous bull terrier Blazer, known formerly as the "Fighting Terror of Gramercy Park." Dingah was not in his dungeon deep last night when inquiries were made for him. All the porter knew was that a woman in a dark blue silk dress had come down after the monkey, and when he remonstrated about her taking him away she replied:

"What! You would dare to separate my pet from me? I should say not!" Then she went away.

SOCIAL NOTES.

The marriage of Miss Rose Marie Nkething, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frederick Nkething, to Roderic B. Barnes, will take place in the Church of the Heavenly Rest on Wednesday, Sept. 6. A small reception will follow at Sherry's. The couple will spend some time in Europe.

The Earl of Granard, who is arriving to-morrow on the Mauretania, will be met at the pier by the yacht Surf, with the Countess of Granard, her father, Ogden Mills; Mrs. Henry C. Phipps, and Ogden L. Mills aboard. The party sailed from Newport last night on the Surf to meet the Earl, who will return to England on Aug. 30.

Mrs. George D. De Witt has left Southampton for Buzzard's Bay, where she will spend several weeks with her mother, Mrs. Flagg.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Swift, (Miss Hurry,) who are at North Hatley, Canada, may be congratulated on the birth of a daughter on Aug. 7 at Hurry Skurry Camp, North Hatley.

Miss Eleanora Sears has returned to Beverly Farms, Mass., after visiting Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont at Marble House, Newport. Harold S. Vanderbilt took her home in his motor car. During the latter part of August Miss Sears will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harriman at Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney plan to sail for their place in Scotland on Saturday. They had originally planned to depart Sept. 23.

Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt is expected here to-morrow from Tuxedo, where she has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French, to meet her mother, Mrs. Francis O. French, coming from France. On Friday evening Mrs. Vanderbilt will give a dinner dance in honor of her mother at Newport. About 500 guests have been asked to Harborview for the dance. The affair will be as a surprise to Mrs. French with the entire Summer colony members assisting.

COL. ASTOR'S FIANCEE ILL.

Miss Force's Nerves Give Way Under Strain of Engagement Publicity.

The condition of Miss Madeline T. Force, the fiancée of Col. John Jacob Astor, who has been ill for the last day or so at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Force, 18 East Thirty-seventh Street, was said late last night to be unchanged. It is said that her nerves have given away under the strain of publicity and the discussion which her engagement to Col. Astor has aroused.

Dr. Lewis A. Connor of 58 East Forty-ninth Street, a physician for the Astor family, is attending Miss Force. Col. Astor was an early caller at the home of his fiancée, and there were many messages of inquiry received during the day from Col. Astor's friends at Newport regarding her illness.

The attending physician would make no statement regarding Miss Force's condition, but it was said at the house that she was able to sit up, and had done so several times during the day. Col. Astor himself is reported as saying that her indisposition was nothing serious, but a state of nervousness on account of the tremendous strain to which she had been subjected.

For the last two weeks Miss Force has been entertained a great deal, especially at Newport, where she entered into the outdoor activities, such as tennis, with great vim, and also attended many of the dances and dinners. Her last public appearance was last Tuesday, when she took luncheon with Col. Astor at the St. Regis.

R. E. BLACQUE BEY WILL WED.

Secretary of Turkish Embassy at Berlin to Marry Miss Kalman in St. Paul.

Richard Edward Blacque Bey, First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy at Berlin, is on his way to St. Paul, Minn., where his marriage to Miss Josephine Kalman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Kalman of St. Paul, will be celebrated on Aug. 24 in the St. Paul Cathedral at 4 o'clock. The bridegroom-to-be is a familiar figure in New York and he remained here several days after his arrival from Europe.

Several hundred invitations have been issued for the church ceremony. Miss Kathleen Beresford, daughter of Lord and Lady Beresford, who arrived here yesterday on the Olympic, will be the bridesmaid.

The couple's "at home" cards, which have been issued, read:

"At home, Turkish Embassy, in Berlin, Oct. 1."

Miss Ruxton to Wed on Sept. 23.

The wedding of Miss Dorothy Vernon Ruxton, daughter of Mrs. George Livingston Nichols, to Adolph Boissevain of Amsterdam, Holland, will take place on Saturday, Sept. 23, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nichols, Alderbrook, Katonah, N. Y.

Miss Nichols was introduced to society two years ago. Her stepfather is a member of the law firm of Masten & Nichols of this city, and the family spend the Winters at the Hotel Gotham. The couple's engagement was announced here in June while Miss Ruxton was with her folks on a motor tour through Holland.

Mr. Boissevain is a member of a family prominent in banking circles in Amsterdam, and is a relative of G. Louis Boissevain of New York.

ern-Brandeis Wedding Oct. 10.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Brandeis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Brandeis of Omaha, Neb., and Irving C. Stern, youngest son of Louis Stern of this city, will take place on Tuesday, Oct. 10, at 3 East Eighty-first Street, this city.

Miss Bassett to Wed Rev. Philip Cook.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Adeline H. Bassett, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Bassett of this city, to the Rev. Philip Cook, vicar of the Chapel of the Incarnation. No date has been set for the wedding.

Dinner to Capt. Smith of the Olympic.

Gen. Charles Miller and Mrs. Miller, who returned on the Olympic yesterday, gave a small dinner last night at the Waldorf-Astoria to Capt. E. J. Smith of the Olympic. There were large and small ships in the decorations and the ices were served from a miniature Olympic.

H. R. Major Back from Switzerland.

H. R. Major, formerly a member of the banking firm of Heyl & Major of Philadelphia, has returned from Lausanne, Switzerland, where he has been residing with his family for the last two years.

New Babies' Milk Station Opened.

The Board of Health announces the opening of a Pure Milk Station at 207 Division Street. This is the fifteenth station to be opened by the department. The section where the new depot is located is one of the most congested in New York. Although the deaths of babies are much lower than last year, the charity kept by the Board of Health indicate that more are dying in this locality than elsewhere in the city. The Association of Infants' Milk Stations reports that 10,844 babies were registered in all the stations to Aug. 13. This is a gain of 704 during the week and a gain of 4,924 since July 1. Ninety-seven were twenty-nine deaths among the babies registered during the week, the highest number recorded so far in any week.

COURT WON'T STOP THE SUBWAY DIGGING

Contracts for the Lexington Avenue Route Were Legally Awarded, Says Justice Ford.

NO DECISION ON OPERATION

Justice Ford handed down a decision yesterday in the Supreme Court denying the motion brought by the Admiral Realty Company for an injunction restraining the digging of the new subway. An appeal is likely to be taken to the Appellate Division, but this cannot be brought until October, and there is nothing to prevent the Bradley Construction Company from going ahead with its task for the next two months.

The court held that in the argument as to the legality of the award of certain contracts, considering the modification that had taken place in the size of the tunnel, nothing had been brought forward to show that the public officials had not acted in good faith and in compliance with the law. With regard to the second question as to the constitutionality of the proposed plan of operation, whereby the city will guarantee certain dividends to the B. R. T., the court held that it was as yet premature to raise the issue. The decision on these points reads:

Upon the argument I was inclined to the view that the changes in the specifications of the construction contracts between their advertisement and actual award might be of such a nature as to call for the intervention of this court, but a careful study of the excellent and exhaustive briefs submitted has brought me to the contrary view. Plaintiff has, in my opinion, failed to rebut the presumption that the public officials charged with the preparation, advertisement, and awarding of the so-called Bradley contracts have acted throughout in good faith, and in compliance with the law. Indeed, there was not injected into the arguments or inserted in the briefs any suggestion reflecting upon the integrity or capacity of any public official.

The graver question is the second. The seemingly contemplated guarantee of certain net earnings in perpetuity, if bidding might, or might not, be either violative of the Constitution, or ultra vires of the municipal corporation. But I think that plaintiff's application for injunctive relief upon this branch of the case is premature. The proposed plan of operation with its prospective guarantee of net earnings could be held to imminently threaten irreparable damage to a taxpayer only on the assumption that the public authorities of the city intend to disregard the plain intent of the statute. After plaintiff appears and objects at the public hearing required by law to be held upon the proposed contract for operation—if indeed such a form of contract as the one in question is ever actually advertised for bidding—if the public authorities then persist in attempting to consummate it, an application for a restraining order might properly be entertained, but the possibility of such consummation, it seems to me, is as yet too remote to warrant the court's interference with the thus far lawful acts of public officials.

In view of the magnitude of the public, quasi-public, and private interests involved in this motion, it goes without saying that all parties concerned desire a speedy determination by the courts above of the questions raised by this motion. While I have tried to get at the merits of the controversy and, indeed, have given consideration of the motion precedence over that of the multitude of others pending before me, yet I do not think I am called upon to discuss the questions involved at greater length. The two mentioned in this memorandum are, in my opinion, the only ones of serious import. I feel that counsel, who are thoroughly familiar with the case, will be sufficiently informed from what I have said of the phases of it which have impressed me and in what manner I have been impressed. With that I think my function is fully discharged. Motion denied.

Louis Marshall, counsel for the Admiral Realty Company, after he had read the decision, declared that his clients would in all probability appeal.

"I regret," he said, "that the court has not seen fit to pass on the constitutional question, and we shall certainly take steps to obtain its judicial determination. It is in the interests of the whole city that this shall be done at the earliest possible moment. It is very important that we shall be right on such an important matter as the building of a new subway, and if we act hastily and go wrong, it will be another illustration of the old proverb, the more haste the less speed.

"If it is held that it is premature to raise the question of the constitutionality of the proposed plan of operation, we shall certainly bring it up again whenever there is another overt act in its direction."

NOTABLES COME ON OLYMPIC

J. P. Morgan Boards Yacht for Summer Home—Corey Talks Business.

The financial world was well represented on the White Star liner Olympic, which got in yesterday from Southampton. Among her passengers were J. Pierpont Morgan, who has been as far afield as Egypt; E. T. Stotesbury, Mr. Morgan's Philadelphia partner; William E. Corey, former President of the United States Steel Corporation; Capt. D. L. Hough, builder of the Pennsylvania Railroad's East River tubes, who has been to Russia on business connected with a railroad concession, and Robert Bacon, American Ambassador to France, who before he entered diplomatic life was a partner in the banking house of Mr. Morgan.

Mr. Morgan was at breakfast on the Olympic when a steward brought him word that his yacht, the Corsair, was in sight.

The financier jumped from the table and ran up the companionway to the deck. He stood beside the rail for ten minutes, waving his hand to those on board his yacht. Then he went back to the dining table and resumed his interrupted meal.

"You know I never talk," he said, "I have absolutely nothing to say, and I will not give out a statement either now or later."

Mr. Morgan parried a volley of questions from interviewers. At the pier he was met by his son, J. P. Morgan, Jr., and his son-in-law, W. P. Hamilton. After his baggage had been examined the party boarded the Corsair and steamed away for Mr. Morgan's Summer home at Highland Falls.

Mr. Corey denied the rumor that he was soon to go into business with Charles M. Schwab. He said that business, especially the steel and shipbuilding business, was better in England than in this country. He attributed the poor business on this side of the Atlantic to the period of rest which must follow years of unprecedented prosperity. "We are now taking up the slack," is the way he expressed it.

Ambassador Bacon said that he was on leave, and would visit Washington.

OFFERS HER INDEX FINGER.

Dr. Mary Walker Only Asks Enough Money for Consumptive Ward.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 16.—Mrs. Reginald Waldorf, an accomplished musician of Philadelphia now in Los Angeles, who advertised for a "living right index finger," can buy the desired member, if she likes, from Dr. Mary Walker of Oswego, N. Y., it was learned here to-day. She sends the following letter to Mrs. Waldorf:

Mrs. Reginald Waldorf: I have just read that you desire to purchase a right index finger. Will you give me enough to erect a consumptive ward on my estate here? I have saved hopeless cases, and I honestly declare consumption is not contagious money is not forthcoming to erect a ward. I finish this letter not using my index finger.

MARY E. WALKER, M. D.
Surgeon in War of 1861-65.

P. S.—If return ticket is sent I will come immediately so you can decide if my finger is desired by yourself. DR. WALKER.
Oswego, Aug. 14, 1911.

Mrs. Waldorf desires a finger to replace one she lost in an accident. She is supposed to be independently rich and capable of paying any price for a finger, provided it suits her. She believes the finger can be grafted on her own hand, and that eventually she will again have a perfect one.

Dr. Walker is 81 years old. She figured prominently in the civil war as surgeon. She was one of the first women physicians and workers in this country, and she has always appeared in men's clothes.

PLANS FOR RUSSIAN DANCERS

Pavlowa and Mordkin, Reconciled, to Head the Single Imperial Troupe.

Nearly every day a denial or a contradiction of some previous report concerning the Russian dancers is cabled from abroad. One day we are told that Serge Diaghilieff's troupe, headed by Nijinsky and Karsavina will not be seen at the Metropolitan Opera House as originally announced, and the next a cable arrives telling of a final split between Mlle. Pavlowa and Mme. Mordkin. Max Rabinoff is the American manager of all these groups of dancers when they are not appearing at the Metropolitan and it was hoped that his return to America Tuesday on the Kronprinsessin Cecilie would settle some of these questions. However it [illegible] that is not finally.

Mr. Rabinoff seems to have put all his eggs into one basket, for instead of two troupes we are told that the Imperial Russian dancers will include Pavlowa, Mordkin, and Catherine Geltzer. Julia Sledowa is also announced and Carlotta Zambelli, who in Paris is considered without a rival, is casually included. There is no mention of Nijinsky and Karsavina. Mlle. Zambelli is the leading dancer at the Paris Opera.

Mr. Rabinoff announces that the trouble between Pavlowa and Mordkin is fully patched up and thinks there will be no recurrence of it. He also announces the production in English of Louis Ganne's operetta, "Les Saltimbanques." Louis Ganne is the composer of "Hans the Flute Player," and "Les Saltimbanques" was the opening production of the Italian Comic Opera Company, which has been heard in New York most of the Summer.

Mr. Rabinoff says also that he has engaged F. Streta, a cantor from a Hebrew Temple at Warsaw, Poland. He has a tenor voice and he will give concerts.

The Imperial Russian Balalaika Orchestra, which is also under Mr. Rabinoff's management, will sail for America on Sept. 23. Pittsburgh will be the first city visited by this orchestra on its second American tour. The orchestra will be heard with the Russian dancers when they appear at Madison Square Garden on Oct. 16, 17, and 18. Mr. Rabinoff also announces that the several members of the ballet will sail on the President Lincoln on Sept. 10, and that Pavlowa and Mordkin will sail on Sept. 27.

HIPPODROME'S NEW SHOW.

"Around the World," by Carroll Fleming, to be a Consecutive Spectacle.

The Shuberts announced their plans for the next season at the Hippodrome yesterday. The opening this year, as usual, will take place on the Saturday before Labor Day. A departure from the usual custom in Hippodrome shows, however, will be a composite and consecutive entertainment this year, instead of a series of three or more forms of show.

The piece will be called "Around the World," written and staged by Carroll Fleming, and originated and designed by Arthur Goergtin, the scenic producer of the Hippodrome. The musical numbers are being staged by William Wilson, and the lyrics and music are by Manuel Klein. The entertainment has for its theme a party of tourists making a tour of the world. Seventeen sets of scenery will be used, and the company will be as large as any the big playhouse has held. Marceline, the clown, will have a pantomime role, and about 200 animals will take part in some of the pageants. The big tank will have a large share in the entertainment.

ALL NIGHT UNDER PUSHCART

Children Who Ran Away to Escape a Whipping Found—Have Party Instead.

The two children, aged 9 and 11, of Mr. and Mrs. William Mayer, who live at 319 East 137th Street, ran away from home on Tuesday to escape punishment. They passed the night under a pushcart, seeking shelter from the storm, but were drenched by the rain of the afternoon, and each had only eaten some buns and a glass of milk. They were found by their father at noon yesterday sleeping in a doorway at Washington Avenue and 161st Street. They were taken home and excused from punishment.

Florence, the elder of the two, and James, her brother, were supposed to have gone to their aunt's home on Monday afternoon, but instead they went to St. Mary's Park. When they returned home at 11 o'clock their father said he would punish them on Tuesday when he returned from work.

In the afternoon the children were sent to a drugstore by their mother to buy some medicine, so they decided to run away. They found some playmates, but when night came and their friends went home they found themselves alone.

Near Third Avenue and 161st Street they found a pushcart, and they crept under it and fell asleep. At daylight the owner drove them out, so the boy bought some rolls and milk with the money that should have gone for his mother's medicine, and the two breakfasted on a doorstep.

Their parents searched for them all night and Mr. Mayer was rewarded by finding them at last. It was the boy's birthday, he said, so instead of a whipping a party was given in his honor, and all old scores were forgiven.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The cast to support John Drew in "A Single Man" has been completed by Charles Frohman, and will consist of Mary Boland, Thais Lawton, Jane Laurel, Louise Drew, Morton Selton, and Thomas Kelly.

Franklyn Underwood has been engaged as leading man in support of Mrs. Leslie Carter in "Two Women" this season. The role was played last year by Robert Warwick. Mrs. Carter's season will begin at Asbury Park on Sept. 23, under the management of John Cort.

Liebler & Co. have engaged Eben Plympton for the role of Count Antoon in "The Garden of Allah," the first engagement they have announced for the Robert Hichens drama that is to be presented at the Century Theatre. The same firm has also engaged Violet Heming to play Doris Moore in the Eastern company of "The Deep Purple."

Eileen Clanford of George Edwarder's London company has been engaged for the ingenue role in Blanche Ring's company in "The Wall Street Girl." Miss Clanford succeeded Adrienne Augarde in "The Dollar Princess" last year.

Wagenhals & Kemper have changed the date of the opening of the Augustus Thomas comedy, "What the Doctor Ordered," at the Astor Theatre, from Monday, Sept. 18, to Wednesday, Sept. 20. The company will play the week of Sept. 11 in Toronto, and will then rest for two days before the New York opening.

Miss Rena Hoffman, who was with Elsie Janis in "The Fair Co-Ed," will begin an engagement at the Folies Bergere next week in a number called "The Dance of the Centipede." She will be assisted by two Brasilians in the production.

CITY CLUB PRESIDENT QUESTIONS MAYOR

Asks Him Why New Charter Doesn't Let Controller Alone Until His Term Ends.

AND OTHERS BESIDES MAYOR

Mr. Strong Reminds Mr. Gaynor That the Letter to Hinrichs Failed to Answer a Great Many Objections.

President Charles H. Strong of the City Club wrote to Mayor Gaynor yesterday saying that the Mayor did not answer in his recent letter to F. W. Hinrichs many of the objections which civic organizations and others had made to the proposed new city charter. President Strong said, among other things:

"With regard to the proposed general veto power of the Mayor you say: 'If it be thought that it should be given, let the new charter give it to the Mayor who shall succeed me.'

"My first question, therefore, is why should not the same policy be followed with regard to changes in the powers of all city officials who were elected at the same time that you were? Why should not the Controller continue to perform until the end of his term the fiscal functions which he was elected to perform? Why should not, until the end of their terms, the Borough Presidents continue to administer the Building Department, to which several at least have given great and disinterested attention? I may add that as a member of the Ivins Commission I favored a single Building Department."

Regarding the Mayor's statement that the proposed charter does not give the Mayor the power of franchise veto, President Strong says:

"It is technically true that this power is not called a veto. It is further true that it differs from a veto in the fact that a veto may be overridden, but that the Mayor's refusal to assent to franchises or rapid transit contracts cannot be overcome, so that in effect the power proposed accomplishes more than a mere veto power."

President Strong asks the Mayor if he is in favor of omitting the provision for the removal by the Governor of the Mayor and the Borough Presidents on charges. He also wants to know if the Mayor is in favor of continuing the present Coroners' office and even increasing the number of Coroners as the new charter provides and points out that the Ivins and Hammond charters provided for the abolition of the office.

Three more prominent educators have written to Charles P. Howland, President of the Public Education Association, opposing the educational chapter of the new charter. They are President Baker of the University of Colorado, President Remsen of Johns Hopkins, and President Pritchett of the Carnegie Foundation.

President Pritchett says, for example:

"I am inclined to believe that those who advocate a paid board have confused the matter of government with the question of administration. In our better colleges the governing board is an unpaid body. Its function is to choose competent executives and then to stand back of their execution with their counsel, their help, and their criticism, but to leave to these trained executives the details and the responsibility of administration. A paid board on the other hand would, I believe, inevitably seek to take into its hands the actual administration of the school system which is the function of the Superintendent of Schools and his associates. This distinction between government and administration is one that obtains in all such organizations, but it is constantly lost sight of. The advocates of a paid board giving their whole time to school system made this mistake, I think, in the failure to discriminate between the two things.

The provisions of the proposed New York City charter dealing with the Health, Charities, Corrections, and Tenement House Departments were considered at a conference of the City Club last night. Francis D. Pollak, who presided, pointed out that the proposed charter would make it possible for the Board of Aldermen to vitiate the present statutes of the State dealing with dance halls and illegal colonization of lodging houses for election purposes. Miss M. Tyson, who discussed these sections, declared it was strange that such provisions should be found in a charter after repeated open attempts to annul these measures had failed of passage in the Legislature.

Dr. J. A. Miller, representing a committee of the Academy of Medicine, criticised the charter provisions establishing a Health Department. He said that the abolition of the Board of Trustees of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals was an unwarranted slap at the most efficient instrument of hospital administration in the city's history.

Dr. William H. Allen of the Bureau of Municipal Research made much of the fact that the ambulance service is to be transferred to the Charities Department. He saw in this provision the influence of Dr. Potter. He declared that grave evils would follow the lack of audit on the Commissioner of Charities' disbursements of $5,000,000 annually to private institutions. Dr. Allen found fault with Commissioner Drummond's defense of this provision.

Ex-Charities Commissioner Robert H. Hebberd, now of the State Board of Charities, said that the city's hospital facilities were twenty to twenty-five years behind the times.

OBJECTS TO NEW THOUGHT.

Man Shoots Stepdaughter Writing a Book on It and Wounds Wife.

Edward Cole, an inventor of brick-making and other devices, entered the apartment of his wife, Annetta, on the fifth floor of 245 West 116th Street yesterday morning and demanded to know the whereabouts of her daughter, Anna Thomas. Being told she was in her room he stepped into it and a moment later Mrs. Cole heard two shots. Her daughter staggered out with blood streaming from her face. Cole followed her flourishing a revolver, but Mrs. Cole grappled with him, and in the struggle two more shots were discharged, one of which wounded her left forearm. Then Cole pulled himself free and escaped by way of the roof.

When Policeman Callahan and several neighbors reached the scene, the two women had fainted and Frederick Snyder, a boarder, was trying to revive them. They were removed to the Harlem Hospital, where it was discovered that neither was dangerously hurt, the girl having received in the left cheek a bullet which went out at the mouth, and the mother having merely a flesh wound.

The women could account for Cole's action in no other way than that he seemed to have objected lately to his daughter's studies in the New Thought religion, concerning which, she said, she and Snyder were collaborating on a book. Cole lived in a furnished room at 298 West 115th Street, taking his meals in his wife's flat.

SALE OF THEATRE DENIED.

When the New York Is Sold, Says Owners, It Will Be for Real Money.

Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger, in behalf of the New York Theatre Company, yesterday denied a report that the New York Theatre property had been sold.

"Many persons, including Mr. Charles B. Leeds of Chicago, have been dickering for the property for the past eighteen months," said Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger, "but it has not been sold, nor has anything been done as yet to justify yesterday's publication of plans.

"Evidently some overzealous promoter or his press agent has made the wish the father to the thought in this instance. When the New York Theatre is sold it is going to be sold for real money, and we are going to be among the principal players. Meanwhile, Mr. Charles Frohman will continue to manage the Criterion Theatre while we will operate the New York Theatre for the New York Theatre Company."

STANLEY RHODES DIES.

Heir of Cecil Rhodes Succumbs to Injuries in Auto Smash.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Stanley Rhodes, a nephew of the late Cecil Rhodes, from whom he inherited a large fortune, died in a hospital here to-day as the result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident near Brooklands last Saturday.

Mr. Rhodes's wife, who formerly was Mabel Russell, an actress, was badly injured in the accident. Mr. Rhodes visited New York last year while making a trip around the world.

BISHOP OF SALISBURY DEAD.

Right Rev. John Wordsworth Was Well Known as an Educator.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The Right Rev. John Wordsworth, Bishop of Salisbury, died to-day. He was born in Harrow, Sept. 21, 1843, and, aside from his high ecclesiastical position, was well known as an educator and author of religious publications. The Bishop attended the forty-third convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Cincinnati a year ago last May. During his trip to the United States he preached in Trinity Church, New York, on "Christian Discipline of the Will" and also visited Boston.

The Rev. John Wordsworth was created Bishop of Salisbury in 1885 after serving eighteen years, being ordained in 1867 as Prebendary of Lincoln. Select Preacher, and Professor of Theology at Oxford. The list of his publications is extensive and on subjects related to the Church of England. In 1904 he was elected a Fellow of the British Academy.

Ex-Police Commissioner Strahan.

Ex-Police Commissioner John W. Strahan died at his home, 595 High Street, Newark, N. J., yesterday, after a long illness. He had been in failing health since November, 1907, when he suffered a stroke of apoplexy. He was born in York, Ontario, Feb. 3, 1848, and was of Scotch-Irish descent. Mr. Strahan retired from the clothing business with a fortune twelve years ago. He was elected Alderman on the Democratic ticket in 1885 and again in the following year. He was appointed Police Commissioner Aug. 2, 1890, to fill the unexpired term of Charles Marsh. He was appointed again in 1892 and again in 1898. Mr. Strahan is survived by a widow and two sons.

Bringing Mr. Gates's Body Home.

CHERBOURG, Aug. 16.—Among the passengers on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which sailed for New York to-day, are Mrs. John W. Gates and Charles G. Gates, who are accompanying the body of John W. Gates, who died in Paris recently.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

UNION PACIFIC VERY WEAK

Selling from Abroad Helps to Depress Our Market—Failure in London.

Many new low prices for the year were reached in yesterday's selling. The little that was left of Monday's recovery after Tuesday's reaction was swept away soon after the opening and without meeting much resistance a number of the active stocks, including Union Pacific, United States Steel and Reading broke through their previous low prices and went from 1 to 3 points under them. Full advantage of the weakness of the market was taken by the bear traders, but the general course of prices could only be accounted for by continuance of liquidation and by the absence of any support adequate to absorb without loss in price the amount of stock which was pressing upon the market. Brokers reported that even at yesterday's further declines not overmuch public demand was developing, and the market seemed still under the influence of the depressed sentiment, which is the outcome primarily of the political activities against the business interests of the country. There was a recovery from the low prices and then another decline which left the most active stocks about a point above the lowest of the day. Union Pacific again led the decline, and its loss was the greatest which it has shown on any one day since the decline began, 4⅝ points. Net losses of from 1 to 2 points were numerous, and there were such exceptional declines as 6¾ in Rock Island preferred and 8 in Texas Company.

It is not surprising that the disappointment which had been felt at the failure of the market to hold its rally on Tuesday should have been increased by the course of events on the Stock Exchange yesterday. So far at least as surface indications went the downward course of prices encountered but little if any more resistance than was offered at the much higher level at which the decline began. This is doubtless accounted for by the fact that the decline, severe as it has been, has not yet attracted public buying commensurate with the volume of liquidation which has been under way. Every day brings nearer, however, the point at which confident buying will be started as a result of the conviction spreading among investors that all the adverse elements in the situation have been sufficiently discounted. The question naturally arises here, however, whether or not it will be any easier for the public at large to gauge the effect of the political factor in the situation than it has been for the larger holders of securities to satisfy themselves of the extent to which political activities will continue to influence the value of securities.

The market started under adverse influences, for the early cables from London brought news of three small failures at the settlement there, two of which were due to the decline in American stocks, and there was also rumor of a failure at Berlin. To the latter was attributed some of the selling of Canadian Pacific, which opened at a decline of 4 points and later sold off 2 points more. Cable advices received by international banking houses described the Berlin failure as well as the London embarrassment as unimportant, but they were an adverse influence upon sentiment, the effect of which was emphasized by other selling here for foreign account. Though not directly bearing on our own situation the threatened spread of labor troubles in England was another of the unfavorable incidents of the day. Indirectly this may have had some influence here, for a sharp advance in sterling exchange rates was in part attributed to the holding up of shipments from this side with a resultant decrease in the supply of commercial bills and in part to sales of American stocks by Europe. The latter selling it would appear was prompted by conditions abroad rather than by the decline in stocks here, for until yesterday Europe had been profiting by the break in New York to purchase the standard international issues.

Quite apart from any consideration of the influences responsible for such a decline as the last three weeks have brought, is the fact that heavy declines in the price of securities unfavorably affect general business sentiment and help to create or to accentuate a feeling of caution which operates against commercial and manufacturing expansion. In periods of overextension the caution thus prompted is one of the favorable results which sometimes grow out of declining stock markets, but in this instance no such good can come from the ills which afflict the Stock Exchange, for instead of overexpansion there has been almost universal contraction of business, until very recently when some growth began, notably in the steel trade. Any check to this expansion is much to be regretted, and it must be regarded as one of the more serious effects of the unsettlement of the market that it should have contributed to a curtailment of orders placed with manufacturers. The Iron Age records in its weekly review that the decline in stocks has made the iron trade cautious, but it points out on the other hand that one of the strong features of the situation is that for months the products of the steel mills have been going directly into consumption. Neither in the steel trade nor in other important industries has there been overproduction for the business of the country for many months past has been done on a hand-to-mouth basis. It is thus all the better prepared to meet such a situation as that presented by the stock market for the past two or three weeks.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

At a special meeting of the Directors of the United States Realty and Improvement Company called for that purpose appropriate resolutions were passed because of the death of John W. Gates, a member of the board.

Leonard W. Lott of Fanwood, N. J., and Samuel T. Aber have been elected members of the consolidated Stock Exchange.

Plans are being completed for the incorporation of the old packing firm of Haisted & Co. The bondholders who recently purchased the plant, good will, and trade marks are arranging for the transfer of the business to the corporation, which will run a general packing house, lard, and oil business under the old name, E. R. Carhart, President of the Produce Exchange, will be President of the new company.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Fidelity Trust Company yesterday James G. Cannon, President of the Fourth National Bank, and Vincent S. Mulford, head of the Jewelers' Circular Publishing Company, were elected to the board.

In connection with the changes in the Hawley syndicate following the entrance of Newman Erb to the boards of the Minneapolis & St. Louis and Iowa Central, it is reported that F. Augusta may retire from the Presidency of these roads. He has asked to be relieved of these duties owing to pressure of other work.

Delaware & Eastern Brings $150,000.

Special to The New York Times.

MARGARETVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 16.—The Delaware & Eastern Railway was sold at auction at noon to-day by Special Master Henry Melville. The road was bid in for $150,000 by W. H. Self, who represented the Bondholders' Committee. The Delaware & Eastern has about fifty miles of track. Mr. Abram I. Elkus of the firm of James, Schell & Elkus told a TIMES correspondent that the road would be reorganized. The name of the reorganized road will probably be the Delaware & Northern.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Unsatisfactory Rumors.

It is rare that liquidation as pronounced as that which has been taking place in Union Pacific makes such headway without bringing the reason of it to light. Brokers were willing to confess yesterday that all of the theories so far evolved to account for the break in the market under the Union Pacific's leadership had proved unavailing. As soon as one floor trader got hold of a new story about the company he hurried to tell it to a friend, who gave him what he had heard in return. When a rumor reached such magnitude as to appear formidable some one in authority took occasion to destroy it, but a new story was at once created to take its place. At the end of the day most of the traders were at a loss to know whether they felt bearish or bullish. The selling of Union Pacific has been inexplicable, because after a drop of several points, when short covering should have occurred if the selling had been for a profit on the short side, the selling orders continued to pour in.

Profits on the Short Side.

It is of course impossible to tell how much of the selling in the past three weeks has represented what Wall Street calls real stock. Brokers who have been watching the situation on the floor of the Exchange say that much "long stock" has been coming out in the last few days. On the other hand, a banker who is well informed on the trading asserted yesterday that not more than 35 per cent. of the sales had been made by people who held Union Pacific to make good their deliveries. It is said that one man who would have found it difficult to raise $5,000 in cash three weeks ago was short 30,000 shares this week. From the week ended July 22, in which the present decline began, to the closing hour yesterday 2,027,650 shares of Union Pacific changed hands. There are 2,166,326 shares outstanding.

Union Pacific's Quick Move.

Union Pacific's high record for the year, 192¾, was established on July 21. Yesterday, only three weeks later, the price made a new low record for 1911 at 167¼. This decline of 25½ points has been continuous but for one brief rally, that of Monday, when the market turned for about 5 points. It is a coincidence that the highest price at which Union Pacific ever sold, 219, was reached on Aug. 16, 1909, exactly two years ago yesterday. At that time the rumor of the segregation of the road's investments had reached its full growth.

Many of the most persistent bears on Canadian Pacific were discouraged by last month's rise, and took considerable losses while the stock was climbing toward record prices. At 247 on July 21 the stock was at the highest point it ever reached. Yesterday it opened in London 1¾ down, and the opening here, taking account of the further declines of which the cable brought news, was 4 points down, at 239. When the present slump set in the resistance of Canadian Pacific was one of the remarkable features of the market. Since its broadest market is in London it has had to contend with the effect of the acute labor situation on the other side as well as the market troubles here.

Low Records on Curb.

The Curb has reflected only to a limited extent the declines in the big market, and, although the trend of prices has been downward, the movement has been extremely narrow. Much of this steadiness is undoubtedly due to the lack of public interest in the Curb's wares and the lack of any considerable movement upward in the coppers for more than a year. Although declines yesterday were fractional in the Curb mining stocks, at least three made new low records for the year. These were Giroux, Butte Coalition, and La Rose.

Recovery in Steel.

Other active stocks were quick to respond to any movement of Union Pacific up or down yesterday. When that issue made a slight rally in the early afternoon, four successive sales of small lots of Steel Common appeared on the tape without any other quotations between the steel prices. These sales were made at 71, 71¼, 71¾, and 71⅞, showing how easily the stock recovered when pressure was removed.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

"Buyers of iron and steel are rather more hesitant in view of late developments." This is the comment of The Iron Age this week on the situation in the steel trade which up to the present has not shown any of the set-back which has been denoted in the stock market. There is no reduction in output noted in this authority's trade comment, although it is suggested that further price concessions might be obtained by buyers willing to contract for a long time ahead.

Speaking of general conditions, it says:

The conclusion has been hastily drawn in some quarters that the Steel Corporation's ingot production, now about 77 per cent. of capacity, is a gauge of the entire industry. Counting 15 per cent. of the corporation's product as exports would give a 60 per cent. operation for the home trade, and that is probably close to the present average of the independent steel companies, whose exports are almost negligible.

On the whole, prices of finished products are not weaker, but in bars alone are they firmer. The situation is one in which deeper cuts might come if there were any good contracting for extended delivery. As long as consumers buy sparingly they will keep price changes within narrow limits.

One of the favorable features of the situation is somewhat brisker business in railroad equipment. Of this The Iron Age says:

There are better reports of fall and car buying. The Oregon Short Line has taken 20,000 tons, the Wichita Falls Railroad 10,000 tons, and the Wabash 2,500 tons—all Bessemer rails to be rolled in the Chicago district. Japan has placed 4,500 tons of rails in this country and Argentina is out for a large lot. The Erie Railroad has divided 4,000 freight cars among three companies and is to close this week for sixty locomotives. The Frisco system has bought 1,200 cars.

The Iron Trade Review says:

A good rate of activity of mills with a somewhat decreased volume of new business and continued irregularity in prices of numerous finished products characterize the situation. Ability to borrow money readily and at low interest rates seems to have improved the demand in certain directions for some time past. Municipalities and gas companies have little difficulty in borrowing money for improvements. The United States Steel Corporation continues to reflect a substantial basis to business by its operations.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

CHICAGO ELEVATED'S LOSS

Preferred Shares Sell at 85, a Drop of Five Points from Previous Quotation.

Declining prices were seen in the markets at other trading centres Wednesday, the quotations following the tendency in New York.

Houston Oil shares were heavy on the Baltimore Exchange yesterday. The preferred lost 2½ points and the common was fractionally lower. The general market was at a standstill.

Another day of declining prices was the story in Wednesday's Boston market. Heavy realizing was in evidence throughout the session. Calumet and Hecla sold down to 400, a decline of 20 points, and Arizona lost about 3 points, to 7⅞, while the balance of the list was from a large fraction to several points lower as a result of the day's trading.

Prices ruled generally lower on the Chicago Exchange, with some of the principal issues showing considerable declines from previous levels. Chicago Elevated Railways preferred sold at 85, which represented a loss of 5 points from the last previous quotation. The common sold off only a shade. The elevated railroads have made an excellent traffic showing since the beginning of the aviation meet, it is reported, and the present week's traffic on all roads probably will be the largest in their histories. Pneumatic Tool was another issue to show a considerable loss, selling down to 46⅜, compared with 48¼ at the previous close. Sears-Roebuck, People's Gas, and Hart, Schaffner & Marx were down a fraction. Delay has been encountered in issuing the terms of the deposit agreement under which the holders of United Boxboard bonds are to be asked to turn over their securities in support of the plan to adjust the company's underlying mortgage. L. A. Wiley, Secretary of the People's Gas Light and Coke Company, who is Chairman of the Bondholders' Committee, left for New York Tuesday. Some kind of an announcement may follow his arrival. The Directors of the Boxboard Company will hold a meeting in New York to-day. It is understood that an urgent request has been made upon all members of the board to be present, as matters of utmost importance are to be acted on.

Reflecting the break in New York, general selling of securities was in evidence in Philadelphia throughout the morning. United States Steel bore the brunt of it, falling more than 2 points on sales aggregating about 20,000 shares. Reading was the next weakest stock, while Lehigh Valley also suffered severely, but was not sold on such an extensive scale.

Yesterday's transactions on the various out-of-town Exchanges, as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES, were as follows:

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—The wheat market was very steady all the session, breaking in the last hour to the lowest point of the decline, closing with a little recovery. The early steadiness of the market was due to the firmness of English cables and unfavorable reports from the Northwest and covering of shorts. The English cables were influenced by the strike conditions and the strength there was local. The Continental markets were somewhat irregular. There was, however, Continental demand for wheat, resulting in freight engagements of 20 loads from New York to Rotterdam and Antwerp and 17 loads from Baltimore. The American Northwestern news was somewhat conflicting. There were reports of damage in North Dakota. Special returns from The Northwestern Miller indicate that estimates still range from 135,000,000 to 175,000,000 bushels for the three States. The weather has not been favorable for harvest and the quality of the wheat has been injured owing to the rains. From the Canadian Northwest the reports are very optimistic. An estimate by a prominent Northwestern elevator man placed the yield for the three provinces at 198,700,000 bushels from 9,925,000 acres, against 104,806,000 bushels last year and the previous record of 119,700,000 bushels in 1909. These estimates for comparison are those of the Northwestern Grain Dealers' Association. The Winnipeg Free Press reports of 20 to 25 bushels per acre would indicate a still larger crop and dispatches were received on the Exchange predicting 200,000,000 bushels for the three provinces. Cash wheat was steady; No. 2 red was quoted 94c; No. 1 Northern, $1.10½; No. 2 hard Winter, 95c; No. 1 Manitoba, $1.06½. The visible supply increased 2,377,000 bushels in the United States, decreased 395,000 bushels in Canada, and decreased 1,000,000 bushels in Europe.

CORN.—The corn market was very steady all day, holding a small advance over the final of Tuesday, and closed at a little net gain. There was considerable buying on reports of hot, dry weather in the Southwest and damage to the crop, although reports from some of the other sections were more favorable. A general rain is needed not only in the Southwest but in the Ohio Valley. The country is selling corn more freely, however, and the receipts have gained about 700,000 bushels over last week in three days and have been nearly double last year, while shipments from the interior have been less than either last week or last year. Cash corn was steady. No. 2 was quoted at 71c, elevator, domestic, and 71c, free on board. The visible decreased 862,000 bushels, against 1,523,000 bushels decrease the previous week.

OATS.—The market was quiet and about steady. The trade was small. Prices are influenced by rather disappointing receipts West. Interior movement is decreasing compared with last week and shows a heavy falling off compared with last year. The visible supply, however, showed an increase of 3,320,000 bushels for the week, following an increase of 1,021,000 bushels the previous week. Standards were quoted at 46c; No. 2 white, 46½c; No. 3 white, 45½.

PROVISIONS.—The trade in hog products was quiet, with the market showing very little change for the day. Receipts were small of hogs at the interior and hog prices continue very firm. The average price of hogs is now about the highest of any time since last Winter.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Prices moved irregularly during yesterday's market with some firmness early on light offerings from the South and from speculative quarters. Later, however, pressure increased, and it was claimed that prominent refiners were supporting near positions, although selling the futures. Some authorities thought that the indicated freer new crude oil offerings, but to date these have been very limited. Consuming demand is fair.

COTTON.

There appeared no definite tendency to values during yesterday's market, with trading on a reduced scale. Weather conditions in the western States were favorable, but this influence was counteracted on Tuesday, while in the other belts there was still sufficient apprehension over the situation to inspire cautious selling. At the start the list was only slightly changed as compared with the previous finish, and thereafter ruled generally below the previous close, although at no time was the market very weak. New Orleans, following our close, advanced 3 to 6 points.

Early Liverpool cables were much better than anticipated, but on private advices of showers at scattered points in Texas, which reports were later confirmed by the

TALK OF U. P. DIVIDEND.

Reports That It Will Be Reduced, but Insiders Emphatic to Contrary.

Julius Kruttschnitt, Vice President of the Union Pacific, in charge of operation and maintenance, is in New York for a few days. He says that crops along the Harriman lines, from reports sent in from independent sources, promise to be well ahead of the indicated yield as estimated by the Government statisticians. He looks for a harvest above normal in that section.

"Business is not bad in the West," said Mr. Kruttschnitt. "Manufacturing plants in Chicago and elsewhere are not being operated up to their capacity, but that is true of most industries. Our transportation plant could handle a considerably increased volume of business, and there is not the demand for cars that we usually experience at this season, but the outlook is not bad."

Reports were again current in the financial section yesterday to the effect that the Union Pacific's dividend would be reduced at the next meeting. Some brokers went so far as to offer to wager 10 to 7 that there would not be another quarterly declaration of 2½ per cent. An influential Director of the company said that but for his official connection with the road he would be willing to bet $1,000,000 against a reduction.

The labor situation, which had a threatening aspect last week, seems to have improved. The Western roads have left the initiative to the unions, and the absence of any action on their part is taken by the officials to mean that the discontent will disappear.

A belief that Mrs. E. H. Harriman had been selling a part of the large holdings of Union Pacific left by her late husband gained ground rapidly yesterday when the source of the heavy liquidation could not be learned. This report was denied shortly before the market closed in a statement by Robert S. Lovett, President of the Harriman lines, and Charles A. Peabody, a Director and member of the Executive Committee of both systems and a close advisor of Mrs. Harriman. This statement, which was sent out over the news tickers, said:

"There is absolutely no truth in the report published in New York that Mrs. Harriman is liquidating her Union Pacific holdings. Mrs. Harriman is twenty-five miles from a railroad in Idaho, and is not in any way concerned in the present market movement."

MORE SUBWAY SIDE DOORS.

Interborough Promises That They Will Be Introduced on All Local Trains.

Local trains on the Subway are to be equipped with side doors in exactly the same way as the expresses. Commissioner Bustis presided at a hearing yesterday morning of the Public Service Commission, at which the issuance of an order to this effect was under consideration, but it was brought to an immediate conclusion by the appearance of George Keegan, Assistant General Manager of the Interborough, who announced that the company was already undertaking to begin the installation of side doors in all its trains. A year was given to the Interborough in which to comply with the order completely.

Mr. Keegan read a statement, in which he pointed out that the Interborough had had the fuller adoption of the side doors under consideration ever since they had been proved a success in the expresses. But there had been, simultaneously with the alteration of the express cars, the lengthening of the platforms to accommodate ten-car trains, and this had necessitated the purchase of additional equipment, the installation of the new electric pneumatic braking device, the automatic starting signal, and new draft rigging, while the shops were crowded with cars undergoing alteration.

"We are now preparing," said Mr. Keegan, "to proceed with the work of installing the centre side doors in the cars in the local service, and have already placed orders for some of the material. This work will involve an expenditure of $380,000. In the last two years the Interborough Company has spent more than $3,500,000 of its own money in Subway equipment, so as to permit the carrying of more passengers in the already overcrowded Subway."

It is expected that the introduction of side doors in the locals will greatly facilitate the service. Under present conditions there has been much delay of locals due to the slowness of loading and unloading passengers through the end doors only, and it has been reckoned that 45 per cent. of the locals are delayed in entering stations by the fact that the local platforms are occupied by trains ahead of them.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The Barkin Construction Co. Buys Big Plot on West Eighty-first Street—New Home for Tammany Club —Investor Buys the Iroquois in Brooklyn.

More activity was instilled into the realty market yesterday, several good sales being reported in different parts of the city, while in Brooklyn the increasing demand for apartment house investment was seen in the sale of the Iroquois apartment in the Prospect Park West district.

In Manhattan the leading feature was the sale of three five-story flats at 208 to 200 West Eighty-first Street, adjoining the northwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue to the Barkin Construction Company for immediate improvement. The buyers contemplate tearing down the old buildings at once and erecting a high-class nine-story apartment.

The property was purchased through H. D. Baker from Klein & Jackson. The latter acquired the plot with additional adjoining property in May. The portion sold has a frontage on the street of 112.5 feet and is 102.2 feet deep. Deals are said to be pending for the remainder of the plot bought by Klein & Jackson for a firm of builders, this being the northeast corner of Broadway and Eighty-first Street, with 213 West Eighty-first Street, 102.2 by 182.7 feet.

Among the minor deals of interest was the purchase by the Tammany Central Association of a new clubhouse site in East Thirty-second Street.

Adds to Fortieth Street Holdings.

William M. Benjamin has sold for Marie F. Coddington 105 East Fortieth Street, a four-story dwelling on a lot 25 by 98.9. The purchaser is the Fortieth Street Company, which owns the northeast corner of Park Avenue and Fortieth Street. The recent purchase gives them control of a plot 98.9 by 180 feet.

Resale of East Seventy-third Street.

Pease & Elliman have resold for Ramsay Hoguet 53 East Seventy-third Street, a four-story high-stoop dwelling, with two-story extension, on lot 17.6 by 102.2. The purchaser will occupy the premises after extensive alterations. Mr. Hoguet bought this property only about two weeks ago through the same brokers.

Tammany Club Buys New Home.

The Hayes estate has sold to the Tammany Central Association the four-story dwelling 226 East Thirty-second Street, on a lot 16.8 by 98.9, between Second and Third Avenues. The club is one of the oldest political organizations in the city and has been located in its own building at 207 East Thirty-second Street, on the same block, for a number of years.

This latter property was recently leased to the city for use as a Court House. The building just acquired will be extensively altered and fitted up as a clubhouse.

Investor Buys East Side Tenements.

George Stuckey has resold to an investor 161 and 163 East Forty-ninth Street, two four-story flats, on a plot 40 by 100, adjoining the northeast corner of Third Avenue. The property was purchased by the seller last Spring from the Maze Realty Company.

Bronx.

Ernst & Cahn and J. J. Pittman have sold to John Becker a plot 97.8 by 100 at the southwest corner of Lafontaine Avenue and 179th Street. The same firm has also sold to Curtiss P. Byron, 927 Courtlandt Avenue, a five-story flat on a lot 25 by 140.

Brooklyn.

The Brown Realty Company has sold to an investor the Iroquois, a six-story apartment house, on plot 90 by 100, at 135 Prospect Park West, corner of Eighth Street, Brooklyn.

Noah Clark, incorporated, has sold the southerly corner of Nostrand Avenue and Union Street, to a client for $30,000, and 698 Eastern Parkway to a client for $15,000; 106-108 Eckford Street, to a client for $15,000.

Suburban.

Fred Niblo has purchased through Reeve & Bartlett the seventy-acre farm belonging to Thomas H. Bergen, at Mattituck, L. I. The farm extends from the North Country Road to the Sound, and contains one of the highest hills on the east end of Long Island. Mr. Niblo will erect a Summer home on the property.

The Paulist Fathers to Build.

The Paulist Fathers have been granted permission by the court to borrow $73,000 from the Seamen's Bank for Savings for use in the erection of a new headquarters for the Fathers. The church is at Sixtieth Street and Columbus Avenue. Plans have been prepared for a considerable time for new auxiliary buildings to supplant those now in use.

The Rev. Father John J. Hughes, President of the society, in his petition gave the value of the church property as $800,000, and said that the society had $50,000 in cash. The society owed, he said, $100,000.

Leases.

Robert Walton Goelet has leased through Worthington Whitehouse, 18 East Forty-sixth Street, a four-story and basement house on lot 20 by 100.5 just west of Madison Avenue, to a florist on a net rental basis for ten years. The owner held the house to rent for $7,500.

The property is directly opposite the Ritz Hotel and its conversion will mark the sixth house so changed in the block between Fifth and Madison Avenues within the last two years.

Daniel H. Renton & Co. have leased for Charles J. Dieges the three-story and basement private dwelling, 588 West 152d Street, to a client for a term of years.

Duross Company have leased the upper portion of the new building at the northeast corner of Fourteenth Street and Sixth Avenue to the J. W. Holloway Company for Peter Minakiki. After extensive alterations the building will be used as showrooms and for the distribution of premiums.

Encroachments Going.

Plans have been filed for removing the encroachments of the convent and home of the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin at the northeast corner of Lafayette and Great Jones Streets. It will cost $7,000 to make these changes. Plans were also filed for removing the encroachments of the Long-Island Hospital on the west side of Second Avenue, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets, to allow for the widening of the avenue. The cost will be $10,000.

The BELNORD

BROADWAY TO AMSTERDAM AVENUE
Eighty-sixth to Eighty-seventh Street

¶ You will find that the Belnord has a number of extra points of superiority among apartment houses of the first rank.

¶ For instance: every room in the Belnord is an outside room; it is the largest apartment house in existence, covering an entire city block and being 12 stories high, and it encloses the largest court.

¶ The inner rooms look on to Belnord Court and its grass plots, shrubbery, walks and playing fountains. This miniature park has an enchanting air of peace and quiet. The simple idea of locating the engine rooms deep under the central court obviates noise and vibration.

¶ Every apartment includes the most modern accessories for comfort and convenience. Apartments contain from 7 to 11 rooms at rentals of $2,400 and up. The Belnord service is perfection. Interested parties are welcome to inspect the Belnord.

¶ Reservations may now be made for October 1st.

The Story of the Loss.

¶ The recovery of Lost Articles depends upon the publicity given.

¶ The first step is to insert an advertisement promptly in the Lost and Found column of The New York Times. Make the advertisement as explicit as possible and offer a reward. Advertisements in The Times have been the means of restoring many valuables not otherwise recoverable.

¶ Start a search for Lost Articles through the Lost and Found columns of The New York Times. The cost is moderate and the recovery certain if a Times reader is the finder.

¶ Go to any advertising agency or telephone The New York Times, 1000 Bryant.

POULTRY TRUST MEN GET PRISON TERMS

Three Months' Imprisonment and $500 Fine for Each of Thirteen Convicted Dealers.

CONDEMNED BY THE COURT

The thirteen members of the Poultry Trust convicted of conspiracy on Tuesday after a long trial in General Sessions were sentenced by Judge Rosalsky yesterday each to serve three months in the penitentiary and pay a fine of $500. This is the first monopoly prosecution in this State that has closed with the imposition of a jail sentence, although this particular statute—Section 580 of the Penal Law—has been on the books for forty years. It is practically the first jail sentence to be imposed in a case of this character in the United States, Brand Whitlock's landing some men in jail in Ohio for two days constituting one of several scattering minor exceptions.

Three of the men sentenced have been friends of Judge Rosalsky's for twenty-five years, and, in pronouncing judgment, he said yesterday that his part was one of the saddest he had ever been called upon to play. Sentence was imposed at noon, and the men were sent to the Tombs. Before the afternoon was over an order was served on the District Attorney to show cause why a certificate of reasonable doubt should not be granted. This William Travers Jerome obtained from Supreme Court Justice Ford, and it is returnable to-morrow before Justice Delany.

District Attorney Whitman came from Boston for the sentencing, having been summoned for the purpose by the Judge, although the prosecution has been the exclusive work of his assistant, Mr. De Ford. The District Attorney urged that the men be not allowed to go with a mere fine. He first declared that many of the acts committed by the defendants were "sordid and mean and contemptible and despicable."

"They are not great money kings, it is true," said Mr. Whitman, "and God help the people of this city if they had been. They did not control gigantic enterprises, but as far as they could, they deliberately extorted money from those who, under the conditions, were about as little able to pay as any in the land. I want to say that there are many people in this city and in this county engaged in various businesses controlling various food supplies that are getting dangerously near the line that separates illegal from legal acts. If it goes forth that in the opinion of this Justice a fine is adequate punishment to protect the community, I do not believe that it will be possible to curb or prevent the various conditions in which the public is so keenly interested. A fine is little more than a license to violate the law."

"A conspiracy to monopolize and control a food product," said the Court, "is a mean and insidious crime stealthily committed and usually, if not always, by men who masquerade in the garb of good repute, but in whose breasts the quality of common morality has been stifled by the most despicable form of greed. It is the kind of crime upon which merchants wax fat at the expense of the poor and helpless consumers. The motives which induced these defendants to disregard public interest was selfish aggrandizement regardless of law.

"These defendants," he said, in sketching a history of the case, "formed a combination in 1906 whereby they acquired an absolute monopoly of a necessary of life. From the time of the formation of this combination they maintained a monopoly by ruthlessly crushing out competition. They employed every harsh and illegal device known to monopoly in protecting the power which they had thus acquired. They forced upon the trade in live poultry an unnecessary middleman, and permitted that middleman to take a profit from the consumer which amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars each year. They fixed the price of live poultry arbitrarily for their own benefit. In fixing the price frequently it was considerably over a normal and reasonable profit.

"During the holiday seasons they paid Jersey dealers to abstain from selling in the New York market and they bought out a slaughter house and closed it during the holiday season. This was done particularly at a time when the demand for live poultry was very large. They forced all the slaughter house men of the city to refuse to slaughter for any butcher who bought from any person not a member of the combination. They paid the only public slaughter house man in the city a monthly salary not to slaughter for any person who could not produce the certificate of their combination to the effect that he had purchased his goods from some member of that combination. The district organizations of slaughter house men, which were a part of your combination in 1908, levied fines upon individuals for violating orders of the combination. In short, your control of the poultry business was not alone absolute, but despotic."

The section of the Penal Law under which the prosecution was brought says:

> If two or more persons conspire to commit any act injurious to the public health, to public morals, or to trade or commerce, or for the perversion or obstruction of justice, or of the due administration of the laws, each of them is guilty of a misdemeanor.

There has been previous litigation under the portion of the law relating to trade and commerce, notably the Milk Exchange proceedings, the Sheldon case of a coal combination, Hoker vs. Vandervater in the matter of a steamboat combination, and Judd vs. Harrington, in which lamb was the commodity. Most of these have been civil cases, and the punishment in criminal proceedings never amounted to more than a fine. Prosecution under the conspiracy law, it has been held, must show criminal intent, which is not true of the Donnelly Anti-Monopoly act, drawn to make easier the path of the Prosecutor. Under this latter law, the American Ice Company was convicted and fined, and under it an indictment against the "Milk Trust" is pending in this county. It is not certain now whether this will be pressed for immediate trial with the encouragement born of the jury's action in the poultry case.

These indictments and the one against the slaughterhouses were brought by Mr. De Ford, who is recognized as the "trust buster" of the Whitman administration, and yesterday he was the centre of congratulations in the office. De Ford was active in the 80-cent gas crusade, arguing the case in the Circuit Court and briefing it for the Supreme Court. He served as a Special Deputy Attorney General in the first move against the ice company, and drew the complaint that set afoot the present inquisitorial proceedings in the ice situation being held before Magistrate Appleton.

Nineteen members of the New York Live Poultry Commission Merchants' Protective Association and of the jobbers' association were indicted in March, 1910. Ten commission merchants and three jobbers were found guilty. By an agreement entered into in June, 1906, it was charged, the commission merchants pooled their commissions with the jobbers' profits and divided up every week, each association then making 50 per cent. and dividing it among its members according to a schedule of percentages based upon the individual business done each week.

The trial lasted twelve weeks, its tedium enlivened from time to time by acrimonious altercations between Mr. De Ford and Mr. Jerome. For the last seven weeks they have confined their conversation to court business, and Judge Rosalsky was careful to caution the jury to disregard the flings which counsel took at each other. Besides its great duration, the trial was unusual for the number of men at the bar at one time. The oldest memory of the Criminal Court Building recalls no trial in which seventeen men were defendants simultaneously.

The men convicted are Irving V. Dwyer and Arthur C. Dwyer of Bayonne, N. J., both of whom were the controlling factors in the Charles Colling Company; Charles Westerberg and William W. Smith of Roselle, N. J., of the firm of Charles Westerberg & Co.; Charles R. Jewell of Belmar, N. J., of the firm of Jewell Brothers; James N. Norris of 1014 Fulton Avenue, Brooklyn, and William Norris of Rockville Centre, L. I., of the firm of James N. Norris Sons & Co.; Charles Schaefer of Newark, N. J., and Charles Schaefer of Bayonne, N. J., both of the firm of C. & H. Schaefer & Sons Company; Edward Hoker of Rockville Centre, L. I., Samuel Vandervater of 108 West Ninety-fourth Street, Solomon Friedel of 126 West Fifth Street, and Charles Werner of 1 Seventh Avenue, of the firm of Werner & Jacobs.

The certificate of reasonable doubt acts as a stay on the commitment to the penitentiary, but does not authorize release on bail. This would follow in the event of the certificate being granted in the Supreme Court to-morrow.

AUNT MAY AID GERAGHTYS.

Mother Said to Have Forgiven Eloping Daughter, but Father Obdurate.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 16.—Mr. and Mrs. Jack Geraghty of Newport have strong hopes of making peace with the bride's family. Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, with whom the bride was a warm favorite, is said to have interceded for her niece and to have won over the young woman's mother, though not her father, Amos Tuck French.

The Geraghtys declined to-night to affirm or deny the reported reconciliation. Mr. Geraghty said:

"Matters are progressing satisfactorily."

Arrangements have been made, it is known, to send a part of Mrs. Geraghty's wardrobe and some of her personal effects to Springfield.

Geraghty has a business appointment to-morrow which may settle the question as to what he proposes to do for a living. Geraghty, it is thought, prefers to locate elsewhere than at Newport.

The story that Geraghty is short of funds is not taken seriously by local tradesmen, who state that he buys freely of first quality goods and pays for them in cash. One estimate, which is believed to be reliable, is that he has with him cash resources of nearly $1,000, without drawing upon his wife's funds or upon his own business in Newport.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16.—Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Paul Geraghty have written the parents of Mr. Geraghty at Newport that they intend leaving Springfield for home on Tuesday next.

There is a report to-day that the couple are coming home to consult an attorney regarding the trust fund which the late Amos Tuck, an uncle of Mrs. Geraghty, willed her and which is said to amount to about $80,000. Her father, Amos Tuck French, is trustee, and has been paying her $100 per month. The principal, according to the will, cannot go to Miss French or Mrs. Geraghty until she becomes 25 years of age.

MRS. PRUYN ASKS DIVORCE.

Former Miss Thurber Sues Francis Lansing Pruyn for Non-Support.

Special to The New York Times.

RENO, Nev., Aug. 16.—Francis Lansing Pruyn of New York was made defendant in a suit for devorce filed in this city to-day by Mariana Thurber Pruyn. Mrs. Pruyn alleges that her husband has failed to contribute to her support for several years and has left her dependent on her parents, with whom she has been living since 1908. The complaint recites that the Pruyns were married in New York nine years ago, and that they have two children now with their mother, for whose custody Mrs. Pruyn asks.

Mrs. Pruyn says that in 1908 she gave up trying to live with her husband and left him. She asks that he be ordered by the court to pay her the sum of $300 per month for the support of herself and the children. Mrs. Pruyn's father, Frank B. Thurber of New York, was head of a wholesale grocery house.

It is said that Pruyn will offer no contest to the suit, and will aid his wife in her efforts to secure a divorce by accepting personal service. The plaintiff came to Nevada about the middle of January, and has been living in a cottage here since that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Lansing Pruyn formerly lived in East Twenty-fourth Street, and the husband is a member of the old Albany family of that name. Four years ago Mrs. Pruyn made known her intention to go on the stage, beginning with a small part in a Shubert production. She let it be understood that the success of Mrs. Bloodgood had led her to wonder why other society women should not shine in the theatre.

ACTRESS MUST QUIT CASTLE

Moore Has Dispossess Warrant Served on Florence Wickes.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 16.—Florence Lillian Wickes, the actress, after successfully barricading for twelve hours the country home in Absecon, where she is living with her mother and sister, against the siege of William Moore, who says the house is his, and the village constable, was served with dispossess warrants to-day, and has until Saturday to vacate.

This leniency was granted by William Moore, who, after being arrested and held in ball on assault charges by Miss Wickes, was advised by his lawyer to be lenient.

Miss Wickes, however, resents this attitude on the part of Moore, and she went to-day to her lawyer in Pleasantville to try to effect more equitable arrangements. It developed then that the lease to the property was in Moore's name, and Moore's lawyer agreed to settle by letting Miss Wickes sell all the poultry and pigs in the barnyard as her share in the final settlement. Miss Wickes was angry, but her lawyer advised her that, under the circumstances, it would be best to acquiesce.

The matter is not to end here, however, for Miss Wickes has threatened to bring suit for the possession of the property and all the furnishings. She declares that it was her money that bought everything about the place. Moore, on the other hand, said that he would not go back to the house until Saturday, at which time he expects to oust Miss Wickes.

SULLIVAN, SMILING, GOES BACK TO JAIL

SOUTHWORTH ALSO INDICTED

Cashier Said to be Ready to Turn State's Evidence in Forgery Case—Will Be Arraigned To-day.

After spending all night in a cell in the Raymond Street jail, following a futile attempt to get bail, David A. Sullivan, the indicted ex-President of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank of Brooklyn, was arraigned before Judge Dike in the County Court yesterday charged with forgery in the third degree. Kenneth A. Southworth, cashier of the bank during the Sullivan régime, has also been indicted and was placed under nominal arrest yesterday. He will be arraigned to-day on a charge of forgery.

When Mr. Sullivan's case was called his counsel waived the reading of the indictment and pleaded not guilty for his client. He then moved a postponement to give him time to read the indictment and decide on his course. Mr. Clarke objected vigorously, announcing that he proposed to begin the trial of Sullivan early in September. Judge Dike granted an adjournment of one week.

When the question of bail came up District Attorney Clarke denounced Mr. Sullivan as one who had made a fortune by "looting" the bank.

"Certain matters have been brought to my attention," said Mr. Clarke, "which I believe should have weighty consideration in deciding the question of bail. I am informed that this man is guilty of one or two other felonious acts, and that other indictments will follow. I feel that we should have assurances of his presence here for trial. I do not say this with any spirit of viciousness, but this man has accumulated a vast fortune, according to credible information which I have received."

At this point the District Attorney noticed a broad smile on the accused banker's face. The court noticed it, too, and ordered Sullivan to stand up straight. Sullivan at the time was leaning on the railing before the bench.

"Smiling as he is now," went on Mr. Clarke, "he told those who examined him in supplementary proceedings recently that all he had was a silver watch and a shoe lace. That was all the satisfaction the poor creditor could get from him because all he had was in his wife's name, and there isn't a dollar's worth of property to keep him within jurisdiction should he remain away from trial. He has a splendid home; he rides around in an automobile, and is living in luxury. Yet, he hasn't a cent. So there is absolutely nothing to keep him here, especially after my declaration that more serious indictments are to follow.

"I ask that the bail be fixed at $25,000. He can give it. His wife, much as I dislike to use her name here, is in a position to furnish much of the property he looted from the bank. I also ask your honor be required to go on this bond."

Mr. Mullin declared that the District Attorney was wrong when he said that Mrs. Sullivan was wealthy. Mrs. Sullivan, according to her husband's counsel, owned only the house in town where she and her husband lived and one in the country. She was willing to give the town house as security, he added.

The court fixed the bail at $15,000, and ordered that it must be furnished by a surety company.

Mr. Sullivan and his attorney were in the Court House until nearly 1 o'clock, while attempts were being made to get a bondsman, but there was none forthcoming, and the prisoner was taken back to the Raymond Street Jail. Before going there he asked permission to return to the jail accompanied by two detectives instead of experiencing the embarrassment of riding there in the ordinary prison van. He was compelled to ride in the van.

The Rev. John Woods, pastor of the Holy Cross Roman Catholic Church in Flatbush, which Sullivan attended, appeared in court yesterday. The priest has known the indicted financier for a number of years and tried to help him in obtaining bail. As the prison van was about to take Sullivan back to jail, Father Woods wanted to accompany the prisoner, but the driver of the van explained that it was against the rules.

It was said yesterday that Southworth, jointly indicted with Sullivan, has broken down and is ready to turn state's evidence. While the Grand Jury was investigating the Sullivan administration of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank before finding the indictment against the ex-President, Southworth was one of the persons who appeared before that body and gave testimony. He appeared, it was said, to explain his connection with the Cheseborough forgery, by which $100,000 was transferred from the account of Mrs. Elizabeth Cheseborough, one of the depositors, to cover up a bad loan of the bank on the eve of the appearance of the State Banking Department Inspectors. It was alleged that Southworth carried out Sullivan's instructions in this matter.

When the sun is sizzling hot and your throat feels parched, ask the man at the fountain for a Rose Rickey—made from the genuine

ROSE LIME JUICE

It will satisfy your thirst as nothing else will do, and besides it acts as a tonic and bracer. A tablespoonful to a glass of water, with or without sugar, makes a most soothing hot weather beverage. Wholesome and pleasing to the taste.

What Is It Worth to the Advertiser to Reach Ninety Million People?

The population of the United States approximates 90,000,000, comprising the most prosperous men and women on earth. Scarcely a home from ocean to ocean, from the lakes to the gulf, that is not influenced by the newspaper. To the National advertiser the use of the newspaper is absolutely indispensable.

The Daily Newspaper Club seeks an opportunity, without obligation on the part of the advertiser, to plan advertising campaigns in the press of the Nation.

The Daily Newspaper Club is the concentrated organization of the leading newspapers of America to place before the National advertiser correct information concerning local conditions, in any part of the country, showing the positive need of employing daily newspapers in National advertising campaigns.

Information cheerfully furnished for the asking, which incurs no obligation.
